Lawsuits loom over roadway planned along Soo Line R.R.

by LYNN ASINOF

A proposed road running along the Soo Line R.R. tracks from Palatine Road to the Lake County line is causing problems for at least two Wheeling developers and may lead to a lawsuit against the village.

The roadway, designated on the official village map for future development, runs through two parcels now before the village plan commission. The Martin Metals Co. is fighting village efforts to get a dedication for the roadway, and village officials have said the fight may lead to court action by Martin Metals.

Martin Metals is seeking to subdivide its property near Twelfth Street in order to sell the southern portion of the parcel. Members of the plan commission, however, are refusing to approve plans until the company grants a 30-foot dedication for the proposed roadway.

THE COMMISSIONERS said the dedication is needed to provide an eventual hookup between Dundee Road and the proposed extension of Lake-Cook Road. They said they have the right to demand such a dedication at the time property comes up for subdivision.

Martin Metals, however, is refusing to grant the dedication. David Calles, representing the company, said his clients have already negotiated a sale contract. He said the contract will fall through if his firm grants the dedication.

In his presentation to the plan commission, Calles noted that the proposed roadway is not developed, and therefore said his firm was under no obligation to provide the requested dedication. He also cited past legal cases to support his position.

"I can assure you there is no legal way those improvements can be compelled under a subdivision control ordinance," he said.

MEMBERS OF the plan commission, however, disagree with Calles. They said Martin Metals was advised of the need for the dedication when they first proposed subdividing the land two years ago.

Martin Metals is now asking the village for a written statement on whether the subdivision plans comply with village ordinances.

"I presume they want an answer in writing so they can use it in court," Village Mgr. George Passolt said. He is now in the process of preparing the answer, and will have his letter reviewed by the village attorney.

While village officials are unwilling to abandon the roadway north of Dundee Road, they apparently are willing to give up the road designation from Palatine to Dundee roads.

The Gatter Corp. is planning to subdivide property on Hintz Road west of Glenn Avenue so it can be developed for industrial use. Plans for the development, however, have been held up because the roadway runs through the property.

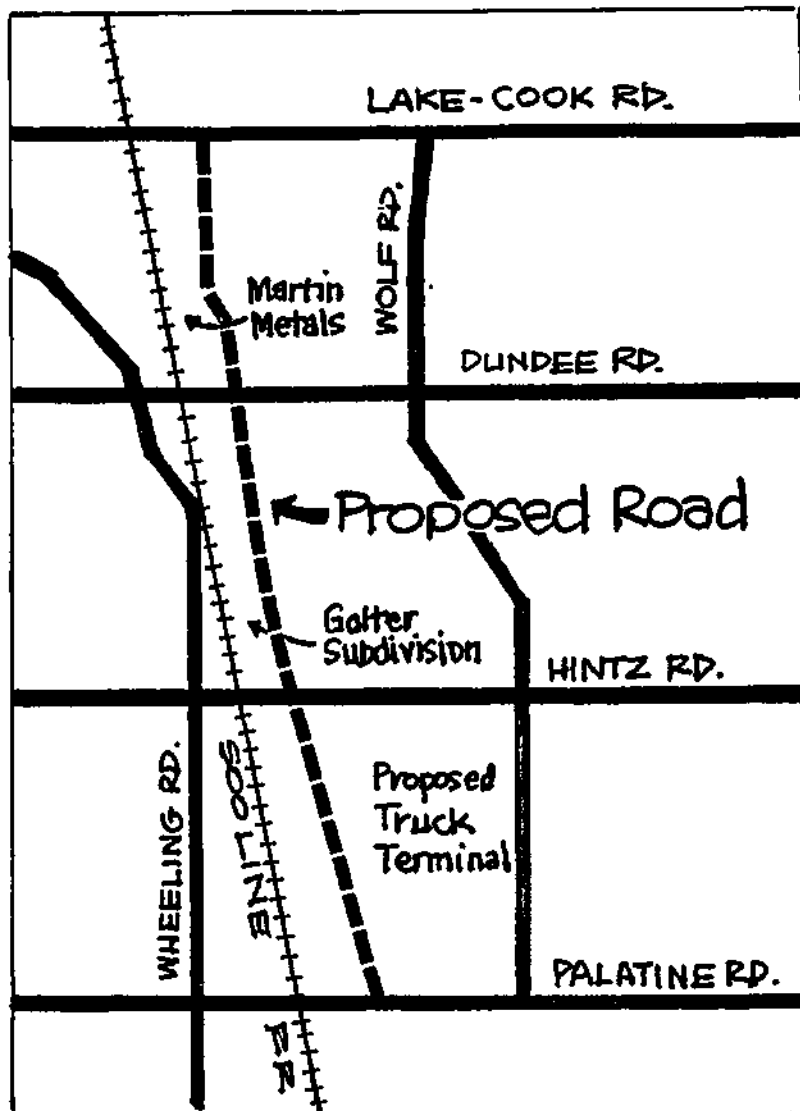

Passolt does not feel the proposed road is needed in this section of the village because of the new Wheeling Road extension located nearby. He noted that much of the land between Hintz and Dundee roads has already been developed. The road would run through a section of the Wheeling Industrial Park and Heritage Park.

"It seems like a useless road from Palatine up to Dundee," the manager said.

THE PLAN COMMISSION, however, has expressed interest in developing a north-south roadway from Hintz Road south to Palatine Road. The road designation runs through a proposed motor freight terminal development, and may affect plans for that project as well.

Passolt said that in order to abandon the road designation, the village would have to schedule public hearings to amend the official village map. Such hearings would be handled by the plan commission, and could delay final approval of the terminal.

He said he did not know whether plans for these various projects could go ahead, or whether they would have to wait for hearings on the road designation.

THIS MAP shows the proposed road running north-south along the Soo Line Railroad tracks that is creating technical problems for at least two Wheeling developers. Village officials have indicated that they want to develop the roadway north of Dundee Road to provide a link with the proposed extension of Lake-Cook Road. Developers along the southern portion of the roadway, however, may have to have the road taken off the official map before they can proceed with their projects.

Does freight station mean traffic woes?

A local businessman and a Wheeling resident have expressed concern over traffic problems on Hintz Road that may develop as new projects are built.

In a letter to the plan commission, William Sander, 258 George Rd., said he feared a proposed motor freight terminal development would cause serious damage to village roads. The plan commission is currently reviewing plans for the terminal, proposed for the southern portion of an 89-acre tract south of Hintz Road.

Sander said the heavy trucks traveling to and from the terminals would result in "daily wear and tear" on local roads.

"A 45-FOOT TANDEM trailer can legally be loaded to 73,200 pounds," he wrote. "And even though the trucking companies involved have advised you that they will not be having much of this large semi-trailer activity in and out of the terminal, it would not be long for even a few of these large loads to cause considerable damage to local access roads."

Sander asked if the plan commission had checked to see if local roads could handle loads of 38,000 pounds, which he said was the estimated weight of most of the proposed trucks. He further asked if the local police department is aware of how to check for correct shipping weights for such trucks.

In his letter, Sander also noted problems caused by heavy trucking over roads used by children, late night noise from the terminals, and possible abusive language by the terminal employees.

A SECOND traffic problem on Hintz Road was noted in a letter to the village board from William Stoloski, vice-president of Fluid Power Systems, 511 S. Glenn Ave. Stoloski said a traffic hazard is developing at the intersection of Hintz Road and Glenn Avenue, which provides the only access to the Wheeling Industrial Park.

"With the growing work force in this area, a serious traffic problem is developing at the intersection of Glenn and Hintz, where there is only a stop sign," he wrote. "I can see the problem and the potential for accidents becoming very serious in the future, as several new plants are now under construction or are planned."

Stoloski said other problems might result if the single access road was ever blocked to emergency vehicles "should a disaster occur in the area." He therefore asked that the village investigate ways of providing a second access road to the industrial area.

The company vice-president said he would be able to get other firms in the area to voice similar concerns over the problem, if the village desired. The letter has been referred to the village manager for further study.

Burglary nets drugs, cash

Burglars took a large number of pills and $494.76 Sunday night from the pharmacy at 850 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling. The pharmacy is in a medical building.

Wheeling police said the pharmacy door had been kicked open apparently between 1 p.m. Sunday and 9:30 a.m. yesterday. Part of the money was taken from the cash register, but the bulk of it was from a bank pouch hidden behind a balance scale.

Prospect Hts. parks weigh referendum

Officials of the Prospect Heights Park District are seriously considering sponsoring a referendum sometime next year. The Herald has learned the most talked-of figures are between $1.5 million and $3 million.

Park District Director Ron Greenberg confirmed the park board has informally discussed a referendum, but added that no firm decision had been made.

"There's been some discussion on the merits of a referendum," he said. "But no firm decision has been made."

Board members, he added, have held "informal discussion" and some have been testing public opinion because "there's no sense going for one (a referendum) if you know it will fail." The Prospect Heights Improvement Association is one group that has been sounded out on the idea of a referendum. Yet despite discussion last week, the PHIA has made no decision whether it could support one.

GREENBERG SAID the park district is initiating an update of its comprehensive plan, particularly in the areas of capital improvements and facilities. If a deficit in facilities is found, Greenberg said it would most probably mean a referendum would have to be held.

"There is no way we could do it with our budget," Greenberg said, meaning any capital improvement project. The park board's recently approved 1973-74 budget was $83,363.

"The comprehensive plan has to be updated before we can seriously sit down and consider a referendum," Greenberg said. Examples he gave of possible projects included a community center or a remodeling of the existing pool on Camp McDonald Road near Elm Street.

Greenberg already has begun studying the pool situation. He has had the State Board of Health review the facility. He has talked with firms about a possible

Death of woman ruled an accident

A Cook County Coroner's jury last Friday ruled the Sept. 6 death of a 61-year-old Berwyn woman in Wheeling an accident.

Christine Stanek was killed in a traffic accident at Whippletree and McHenry roads, Wheeling. Police charged Gregory A. Stavros, 19, of 10 N. Willwood Dr., Prospect Heights, with failure to yield right-of-way. His case has been continued to Nov. 8 in Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

State will match funds for park site

Matching funds for the Wheeling Park District's purchase of a 2.4-acre park site on Valley Stream Drive have been approved by the Illinois Bureau of Outdoor Recreation.

Park Supt. Dave Phillips said BOR has agreed to provide up to $50,000 in matching funds for the site, which will be used as a neighborhood play area. He said, however, the park district is still awaiting official confirmation of the state grant.

Last month, the park district approved purchase of the 2.4-acre site contingent on the district's getting a state grant for the purchase. The site cost the park district $32,500, according to the purchase contract.

THE PARK DISTRICT has been waiting for the approval of such matching funds to begin many of the park programs promised in last year's park improvements referendum. Two other applications for matching funds are currently before BOR, and if approved, would help finance the purchase of two other park sites.

One of these sites is the southernmost 5.4 acres of the Childerly Retreat House property, 506 McHenry Rd. The park district is negotiating for the site, which abuts the new 2.4-acre purchase. Plans call for developing the two parcels as a single 7.9-acre park to be used primarily as a nature study area.

The second proposed park site is a 10-acre parcel at Schoenbeck Road and North Street, which is to be used as a community park. The park district is still negotiating for this site in the western section of Wheeling.

Phillips said applications for matching funds for both sites are expected to be reviewed at the December meeting of BOR. He said the applications were purposely delayed until the governor allocated $3.5 million to BOR, so that there would be money available for the state grants.

"THERE WAS REALLY no reason to submit an application if we knew there was no money," he said. "Now our applications are in. All they have to do now is be submitted on the time schedule we've been provided. There's really nothing more our park district can do."

Phillips said he was confident that the matching grants would be approved in December. He said BOR has sufficient funds to cover all of the park district's land acquisitions. In all, the park district hopes to get $220,000 from BOR.

The park district is still waiting for a freeze on federal funds to be lifted so applications can be made for development of these park sites.

Candidates for presidency needn't bid for commissioner County board adds seat for suburbs

and AL MESSERSCHMIDT

The Cook County Board set up an additional suburban commissioner's seat yesterday in adopting an ordinance that could add a new wrinkle to the 1974 contest for county board president.

The board expanded its membership from five to six suburban commissioners in addition to the present 10 Chicago commissioners, a move ordered last week in a reapportionment ruling by U. S. District Judge Hubert Will.

The new wrinkle is a provision in the ordinance adopted yesterday allowing county board president candidates to campaign for that office alone. In the past, candidates for board president also had to run for a commissioner's seat.

Before yesterday's action, State Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Park Ridge, had announced his candidacy for county board president. Hyde said Sunday he will seek the Republican nomination at a meeting with party slate-makers Nov. 3.

STANDING OUTSIDE the state centennial building auditorium in Springfield yesterday, Hyde predicted a large suburban vote turnout will be the key to upsetting board Pres. George Dunne, a Democrat who intends to run again.

Hyde said his candidacy is "an opportunity to revive the Republican Party locally." He refused to speculate on possible candidates to fill five other GOP county board slots.

County Comm. Floyd Fuller yesterday said he knew Hyde was going to make the announcement, and encouraged it. Fuller said he expects four or five other candidates, including Arlington Heights Mayor Jack Walsh, Joseph Tesson, committee man from Riverside Township, and George Burditt, former Republican state representative from La Grange.

Fuller said he has no interest in seeking the position. He is being named in Republican circles as the man to replace Cook County's Republican chairman, Edmund Kucharski, if Kucharski resigns to take an expected federal appointment.

"A Republican ought to be the chief executive officer of Cook County," Hyde said, because Democrats now control "the three most important political jobs in the state" — governor, mayor of Chicago and president of the county board.

"We need an administration that will put the people ahead of the political party," said Hyde, 49. "I have no promise I will be elected. This is just the opening gun. I wanted to bring my strong interest to the attention of the slate-makers."

HYDE, WHO was a nominee for House Speaker in opposition to Rep. W. Robert Blair, R-Park Forest, said he has considered candidacy for the board post "for about a year."

"I do have support that is pledged for me," he said. Hyde has discussed his candidacy with Fuller and State's Atty. Bernard Carey.

Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, who nominated Hyde for House Speaker, yesterday said, "he has a very good chance of winning. He is very qualified."

Schlickman also mentioned Walsh as another qualified candidate. Walsh has indicated he will not seek the nomination partly because county-wide candidacy requires a large campaign fund but did say yesterday he was encouraged by the addition of the sixth suburban board member.

"Money concerns me," Hyde said. "It will take a great deal because Democratic opposition is formidable. The Democrats can count on a set number of votes in Chicago."

"He'll get the money he needs," Schlickman said. "The cost of county government and the county's enormous home rule powers" will be Hyde campaign issues if he is nominated.

THE PROVISION in yesterday's ordinance allowing county board president candidates to run for that office alone could add two extra contestants to the 1974 ballot. Democrats could field 10 commissioner candidates and one board president hopeful. The GOP likewise could run six candidates for commissioner and one for board president.

The new provision, which follows wording mandated by the 1970 Illinois Constitution, would also allow a suburban Democrat or Chicago Republican to mount a credible campaign for board president. By reason of the former necessity of winning a commissioner's seat, suburban Democrats or city Republicans had no chance of a successful candidacy because the opposition party invariably wins all the commissioner seats for which they are eligible.

The president who was not a commissioner would have executive powers, including patronage, but would not have a vote, even to break ties.

However, county officials and board observers yesterday discounted the likelihood of anyone seeking the board presidency without also running for a commissioner's seat.

SOME OF THE board members were obviously surprised when the ordinance was read. Charles Chaplin suggested the word "may" be changed to "shall." He was told by Dunne that the ordinance was based on the constitution's wording and would not be changed.

The move to add the sixth suburban seat followed last week's order by Judge Will, breaking a 100-year county tradition. Action was spurred last June when the board defeated an ordinance proposed by Fuller that would have created a board of nine city and six suburban members. He filed suit in Federal Court challenging the board decision, and entered amended census statistics to show that suburban voters were not receiving proportionate representation.

The sixth seat will break the Democratic deadlock on key county spending issues that have to be passed by a two-thirds majority.

Real estate assessment reform gaining acceptance

A greatly reformed plan for assessing real estate in Cook County is meeting with acceptance on most fronts, although special interest groups have asked for some changes.

The new plan would place all property in five categories, giving relief to the individual residential property owner and putting more of a burden on businesses and industry.

County Assessor P. K. Cullerton has urged the county board to accept the plan, most recently discussed last week at a special hearing held by the board's finance committee.

The Citizens' Action Program has endorsed the new measures completely, suggesting only that the percentage of valuation be increased for commercial establishments. Paul Booth, spokesman for CAP at the hearing, said details will have to be changed later, but acceptance of the new system now is a major step toward building taxpayer faith in the assessment procedure.

REPRESENTATIVES of real estate organizations in Chicago told the finance committee they feel more relief is needed for owners of deteriorating property.

The spokesman said property on the south and west sides, for example, is being abandoned by owners because rent income cannot meet the expenses of taxes and required maintenance. The representatives suggested a lower, standard rate for properties that are losing money, possibly as a new category.

The business community of Evanston presented the most vocal arguments against the system. One man even asked that the present classification system be abolished in the county. The alternative, as done in several states, is to assess businesses and residences at the same per cent of market value.

Gerald Murphy of the Evanston Chamber of Commerce said that suburb has already suffered effects of the change last year in assessment procedures from the "brick and mortar" property valuation to market value system. He said businesses have indicated they are leaving or will not expand in Evanston because of the heavy tax increases.

THE CIVIC Federation of Chicago supports the new system reluctantly, as a step in the right direction, said D. Daniel Baldini. He said the federation would prefer a non-classified system, but the proposal of five categories is better than the 40-plus unofficial categories the assessor's department now uses.

The proposed system was drawn up by Richard Michaels, professor of Law at Loyola University, after the board directed the assessor's office to hold public hearings on a new plan. A specific, written system must be approved by the board if the county is to stay on the classification system, according to provisions of the State Constitution and subsequent action by the Illinois General Assembly.

The plan written by Michaels suggests that assessments be put in these categories:

- Unimproved real estate or farms.
- Real estate used for residential purposes when improved with a house, an apartment building of not more than six living units, a residential condominium, or a residential cooperative.
- All improved real estate for residential purposes but not in the above category.

Herald takes 9 press awards; tops in state

The Herald won nine awards — more than any other daily in the state — in the 1973 Illinois Newspaper Contest sponsored by the Illinois Press Association.

The awards, announced Friday at the 108th annual meeting of the IPA in Springfield, included one first place, three seconds, one third and four honorable mentions. They were accepted by Executive Editor Kenneth Knox.

In another awards competition announced Monday, Herald photographer Bob Finch was named a first-place winner in the prestigious annual News Picture Contest of the Inland Daily Press Association.

Finch was first in the Spot News category of The Herald's division for his photo layout of a Cook County Sheriff's Police man being accidentally injured during a safety training exercise in Prospect Heights. He accepted his award at a luncheon at Inland's 33rd annual meeting in Chicago's Drake Hotel.

Herald photographers also were honored last week at the annual awards ceremony for Suburban Newspapers of America. Finch, Director of Photography Larry Cameron and photographer, Mike Seeling received certificates of excellence in the spot news competition and photographer Jim Frost received a certificate of excellence in feature competition.

IN THE IPA judging, Herald awards included a first in best sports coverage; seconds in general excellence, typography and makeup; and best editorial page; a third for best women's coverage; and honorable mentions for best news story, for City Editor Doug Ray's account of the Palatine fire that killed three firemen; best column for Chief Editorial Writer Tom Wellman's weekly editorial page column, photography, and best use of illustrative material.

In the official comments on the general excellence category, the judges had this to say of The Herald:

"This is nothing more than an excellent newspaper. It does everything well. Typography, photography, writing, breadth of local coverage, departmental strength — you name it, The Herald excels."

The Mundelein Herald, weekly edition published by the Paddock Corp., won two awards in the IPA contest, taking a second in best photography and honorable mention in sports.

Agnew: wrongly forced out

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew told the nation last night he had been wrongly forced from office on the basis of testimony by "bribe-brokers, extortionists, conspirators" but he resigned to spare America a new "paroxysm of bitterness."

In a television address with no parallel in history, Agnew pleaded to his countrymen for understanding, proclaimed his innocence of much more than violating the "new post-Watergate morality" and praised President Nixon for his fair treatment.

Agnew spoke five days after he resigned from office, pleading nolo contendere (no contest) to a single charge of tax evasion in 1967 and was fined $10,000 and placed on unsupervised probation for three years.

Ahead awaits possible efforts by the Internal Revenue Service to collect back taxes and penalties on tens of thousands of dollars of bribes he is accused of accepting from 1967 until last December.

Agnew said he pleaded no contest to "still the raging storm around him."

"Had I remained in office and fought to vindicate myself through the courts and the Congress it would mean subjecting the country to a further agonizing period of months without an unclouded successor for the presidency," he said.

Agnew said he was innocent of wrongdoing by conventional political standards but was sullied by "scurrilous and inaccurate" news leaks and the "wildest rumor and speculation."

"I have never — as county executive of Baltimore County, as governor of Maryland or as vice president of the United States — enriched myself to the betrayal of the public trust." He did, however, make one partial confession.

The charges against him, he said, boiled down that he permitted his political fundraising for his campaigns and his duty to reward contracts to engineers and architects "overlap in an unethical and unlawful manner."

The Justice Department, in a 40-page "exposition of evidence" presented Wednesday to U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman by Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson, charged Agnew was guilty of more than that.

It asserted as one of his first acts in office as Maryland governor in 1967 he arranged a scheme to systematically collect kickbacks from consulting engineering firms awarded contracts under which he collected far in excess of $60,000.

Agnew said he had been determined "until a few days ago" to fight the charges and had been encouraged by an "outpouring of support" from across the country.

But he said, "after hard deliberation and much prayer," he had concluded it would be best for himself, his family and the country to step down.

SPIRO AGNEW

Congress won't rush to OK Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Speaker Carl Albert and Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield Monday pledged a careful and thorough investigation into the nomination of Gerald R. Ford as vice president.

Both said they would support Ford but made it clear Congress would not rush into confirming the House GOP leader.

Albert, first in line of succession to the presidency until a vice president is confirmed, said he would install Ford immediately but added it would be a "serious blunder" not to proceed carefully.

Mansfield called for a "thorough, complete and exhaustive investigation."

Asked if there was a chance Ford's nomination would be rejected, Mansfield said "as of now, there is no possibility. I am prepared to vote for him."

Rep. John Rhodes, R-Ariz., said Monday his chances of succeeding Ford as House Republican leader looked "so good it scares me."

U.S., Soviet Mideast roles deepen

(From Herald News Services)

The involvement of the United States and the Soviet Union in the Middle East War deepened Monday.

The U.S. said it had begun an airlift of more military supplies to Israel in response to a "massive airlift" by the Soviets of military material to Arab forces.

The Soviets pledged — in a joint communique with Algeria — to "assist in every way the liberation of all Arab territories occupied by Israel."

The actions underscored the critical roles the two super-powers hold in the Mideast conflict, and raised the question of whether the increased Russian airlift violated the U.S.-Soviet detente achieved in agreements between President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

The State Department refused to comment on that, but the department did say it had learned over the weekend that the Soviet airlift to Egypt and Syria had increased substantially, amounting to 200 flights and roughly 4,000 tons of equipment since last Wednesday to cover Arab losses in the fighting.

The department said "to an appreciable extent" the new American airlift was designed to prevent that airlift from "unsettling the military balance in the area."

Sources said the airlift included F4

Phantom jets, tanks, ammunition, bombs and rockets.

Underscoring that the U.S. flow might reach heavy proportions was the fact that the defense department called in executives from the scheduled airlines and supplemental air carriers for a review of the airlift.

They might be asked to support the Military Air Command in moving material to Israel, just as civilian airlines were called in during the Vietnam war to fly military supplies to Saigon under contract to the Pentagon.

The new Soviet declaration of support came after a meeting between Brezhnev and other Soviet officials with Algerian President Houari Boumedienne in Moscow.

Their communique scored "Israel's imperialist aggression," and it was confirmed that Brezhnev had written Boumedienne urging him to throw Algeria into the struggle with Egypt and Syria.

President Nixon, hinting at the possibility of direct U.S. intervention, said meanwhile that U.S. policy is to assure the independence of Mideastern nations — as it was in 1958 when U.S. Marines were sent to Lebanon and in 1970 when the U.S. forces were alerted to intervene in the Jordanian civil war.

Sinai battle rages; will be decisive by United Press International

Egypt has succeeded in getting almost its entire army across the Suez Canal but Israeli troops have thrown back another Egyptian human wave assault on one of three vital passes leading into the Sinai Desert, Israel reported Monday. The Sinai struggle was shaping up as the decisive battle of the 10-day-old war.

On the Syrian front, Israel said it had broken through the central sector of the 60-mile-long Golan Heights line, smashing Iraqi armored forces, destroying dozens of tanks and sending remnants of the Iraqi army fleeing in retreat. It was the second disastrous defeat of the war for Iraq.

Farther to the northeast, Israeli patrols struck within nine miles of Damascus, reaching the village of Vissya, and armored columns were within 14 miles of the Syrian capital. But the main Israeli forces were reported bogged down in heavy fighting at the important crossroads town of Saasa, 22 miles southwest of Damascus.

ISRAELI DEFENSE Minister Moshe Dayan reported to the nation that Syria had been pushed far enough back into its own territory behind the 1967 cease-fire line so that Israel could give the highest priority to the Suez front.

Israel said its pilots dominated the skies over the Middle East as they struck deep into Syria and Egypt.

Another indication the war would be long and fierce came from Cairo where Egyptian political sources said Egypt was standing firm on its insistence that there be no cease-fire until the Arabs received ironclad guarantees of complete Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab lands.

MEANWHILE, Western defense analysts said Monday that Israel appears to have lost between 80 to 90 warplanes in the Middle East war, or about 25 per cent, and needs replacements now to continue fighting effectively against Egypt and Syria.

The experts also estimated Syria has lost between 90 and 100 of its fighters or about half of its air force. The Egyptians have lost fewer than 100 aircraft or about 20 per cent of their total air strength, the analysts said.

Walker pushes ethics, mass transit

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Gov. Daniel Walker talked publicly of campaign ethics and tax reform yesterday, but privately lobbied for a compromise mass transit program.

Walker sent a sweeping package of campaign reform proposals to the special General Assembly session. In a joint meeting of the House and Senate, the governor said "there is one commanding need (this year): to restore the badly shaken confidence of people in their government."

Walker listed four steps: tax relief; fiscal responsibility; legislation requiring "high standards of honesty in government and politics;" and a regional transportation authority.

Mass transit drew Walker to a closed door meeting with Democrats yesterday afternoon. The governor, who wine and dined legislators at an executive mansion last night, will explain details of an RTA proposal worked out with backers of Chicago Mayor Richard Daley at a 1 p.m. press conference today.

A special RTA session of the legislature begins next Monday.

Walker's newest plan calls for $162 million to run the six-county RTA in its first year.

The funds would come from general revenue (possibly a state lottery), 50 per cent of license plate fees now used for roads, and vehicle (gasoline) taxes.

With Daley-Democrat backing, Walker hopes to sustain his veto of House Speaker W. Robert Blair's half-cent sales tax reduction for RTA.

Legislative activity began yesterday with a stinging criticism of Walker and the general assembly by Attorney General William Scott.

The Republican Attorney General characterized Walker as a believer of "I am the state." "Walker's desire for dictatorial power" has hindered constitutionally required legislation like a state election board, Scott said.

Scott, who threatened to leave a question and answer session when asked if he will run for governor, said he will release his complete, audited campaign fund report within a few weeks. The Republican said Walker's repeated calls for ethics legislation are "hypocrisy" because the governor has not revealed his campaign sources.

Walker's ethics package — the "open campaigns and honest government act" — would establish a state board of ethics as a "watchdog for honesty in state government."

The bill calls for disclosure of campaign contributions, expenditures, and economic interests of candidates, state incumbents and key state employees.

Contributors of $50 or more would be reported and anonymous contributions would be banned. Persons or firms that do business with the state also would be required to file reports. Secret land trusts would end.

A three-member ethics board, operating on $150,000 annual budget, would enforce the bills with subpoena power.

Eight other conflict of interest and ethics bills were introduced yesterday. Blair reintroduced legislation that won house support last spring. The bill required disclosure of contributions over $100 and provide $150,000 for administration of a state board of elections. Under Blair's bill, however, the enforcement of ethics legislation would remain with the state board of elections.

Representative Robert Juckett (R-4th) of Park Ridge, reintroduced a bill that would require filing of a contribution list with the state's ethics statement.

The bill also won house committee approval last spring. Under Juckett's plan, contributions would have to be disclosed if the total dollars given the candidate represented a particular profession or enterprise.

• Illinois Gov. Dan Walker won another election, but don't expect him to serve. He was the top vote-getter in the just-concluded "Paul Powell Memorial Shoe Box Derby" sponsored by the Northern Illinois University College Republicans otherwise known as their "most crooked politician" contest. The contest, staged as a gimmick to raise money for a 4-year-old Sycamore boy suffering from burns, had Walker edging out NIU graduate student Michael Malbach, a member of the DeKalb County Board; followed by President Nixon, Mayor Daley, former Vice President Agnew, and late secretary of state Powell himself.

• Rev. Billy Graham, declaring we're living in a period of moral permissiveness, said some government leaders who plead morality are being hypocritical, but nevertheless government scandals have been blown out of perspective. Fagin's new pitch: 'Please, buy this poor kid's candy'

by JOE SWICKARD

The Northwest suburbs, and other affluent Chicago areas, are likely targets for illegally employed crews of youthful door-to-door salesmen, warn spokesmen for the state department of labor and attorney general.

The saleskids, often as young as 9 or 10 years old, peddle candy house-to-house with the proceeds ostensibly benefiting an organization for the betterment of youth. However, the spokesmen said, the money from the oft-times overpriced candies enriches the children's boss and not a charitable organization.

Donald Mulack, of the attorney general's charitable trust division, outlined the illegal operation: "Children from culturally and economically deprived neighborhoods are recruited through handbills promising $10 to $15 a week for working after school. They may also promise some prize or bonus to the kids who sell the most — something like a pizza for the most sales in a night or earning points toward a bicycle."

MULACK SAID there are many companies operating in this manner. "We have a whole stack of files but we're concentrating on three or four."

He said two of them, National Youth Clubs of America and Student Opportunity for Self-achievement, were examples of for-profit groups using names that sound like charitable organizations.

The children are divided into sales crews of about five each who are driven by the crew boss to a wealthy neighborhood or suburb, Mulack said. The boss drops the children off and cruises the neighborhood while the children make their pitch, he said.

"The kids use a sympathy approach. They say what the boss told them, and often they don't really understand it

Flower peddling leads to 12 arrests

Two Chicago men and 10 juveniles were arrested by Illinois State Police this weekend on charges stemming from the operation of an illegal street flower-peddling ring.

The 12 arrests were made at four suburban locations, North and 1st Avenues, Ill. Rtes. 83 and 72, Ill. Rte. 58 and Busse Road, and Ill. Rtes. 60 and 10. Police said the two teenagers charged were operating the selling ring by bringing youths from Chicago's south side to the locations to sell the flowers to passing motorists.

Charged with violating the state's child labor laws were Richard A. Berry, 17, of 4815 S. Keating, and Michael E. Doody, 18, of 6008 S. Parkside, both in Chicago. Police said the two violated the child labor laws by using the youths to violate state laws prohibiting peddling on a state highway without a permit.

Names of the 10 youths charged, including three girls and seven boys, could not be released.

BERRY AND Doody were arrested by police at the intersection of Rtes. 83 and 72 where three of the juveniles were also working, police said.

One of the girls arrested was holding

$80 at the time she was charged, according to police.

Police said flower peddling is usually common on special holidays and weekends, but arrests usually number only one or two on any weekend. Crackdowns on the illegal sale of the flowers peak during the spring and summer months when the peddling is most frequent, police said.

Berry and Doody were released on $1,000 bond each. They are scheduled to appear in Mount Prospect circuit court Dec. 10. The 10 juveniles are scheduled to appear on varying dates in juvenile court.

connection with for-profit organizations. Youngsters may, she pointed out, legally sell newspaper or magazine subscriptions in this manner.

Children between the ages of 14 and 16 may work at non-hazardous jobs, but she said door-to-door sales do not fit that category.

Because the saleskids often work from about 4 p.m. till 8 or 9 p.m., they are again breaking the law, Mrs. Pacini said.

"If they are working after 7 p.m., that's another violation of the child labor laws," she said.

She said the saleskids often operate under the threat of fines by the crew boss. "Some we have talked to have said they had to pay 50 cents for the boss' gas if they didn't sell enough . . . some were abandoned in the Loop. They were actually afraid to meet their boss because they hadn't sold any candy. That's why we call them (the bosses) modern day Fagins."

BOTH MULACK AND Mrs. Pacini said they are after the "guy who makes the buck out of this." A Berwyn man was recently convicted after he was arrested while directing a sales crew on Chicago's South Side.

The operators of the businesses claim the law is discriminatory. They contend the sale of candy is no different than the sale of subscriptions.

Mulack and Mrs. Pacini said persons should question any child carefully who claims to be selling candy or similar goods for a charitable organization. If there are any doubts, persons should contact the state attorney general's office, the state department of labor or their local police.

"We're trying to protect the kids. Kids 9 and 10 are being recruited. This is just ridiculous. Child labor laws were set up to prevent this kind of abuse," Mulack said.

themselves. People feel they're making a donation to help kids. When there's some little tyke asking you, you're most likely to pay $1.50 for a box of candy that would cost you about 50 cents over the counter," Mulack said.

He said the children may keep about 25 cents from each box of candy sold, while the boss may keep up to 70 cents per box.

HARRIET PACINI, superintendent of the labor department said the use of the saleskids is in violation of state child labor laws. She said children under 14 cannot sell door-to-door in

No date set for strike yet

Teacher union OKs strike

Members of the Dist. 63 teachers union gave the go-ahead for a strike if no progress is made in the contract dispute with the East Maine Elementary School board.

In a strike vote meeting yesterday at Gemini Junior High School, teachers voted 173-34 to give the union leadership the authority to "do whatever is necessary" to come to a favorable agreement in negotiations.

Nearly 250 of the 330 teachers in the district are members of the East Maine Education Association.

While no date was set for a strike, EMEA Pres. Henry O'Neill said he didn't think the board "can make teachers wait more than a week now that they've given us authorization."

An EMEA board member outlined a plan of action designed to sway board members in the contract dispute, including picketing of board members' homes. Teachers also plan to contact "influential organizations and people" and seek public support through leaflets and newsletters to the community.

"These actions may sound drastic but this is what we're doing instead of striking," the EMEA representative said.

EMEA MEMBERS will also participate in Wednesday's March for Education. Nearly 400 teachers from Dist. 62, Dist. 63 and Dist. 207 are expected to participate in the march from Maine East High School to Rand Park in Des Plaines.

O'Neill termed a board proposal offered at Friday's negotiation session as "basically the same thing they've been offering us since last February 8."

He said the board considers all non-salary items as "their moral and legal prerogatives and they're not going to delegate them to anybody — not the teachers or the parents."

The major obstacle to settlement is the EMEA's request that class size, hours of employment, teaching assignments, reduction of teachers, maintenance of standards and educational policy development be included in the scope of negotiations.

Salaries for the 1973-74 school year were agreed upon in August 1972. EMEA VICE Pres. Ken Howenstine said teachers find themselves in much the same position as Americans did in 1776.

"We don't really want to do it (strike) but that's what we're being forced to do," he said.

In commenting on Friday's 7½-hour negotiation session, Howenstine said the board "more or less asked for it now. By their actions they more or less guaranteed a strike."

The EMEA vice president said the board threatened to withdraw its latest proposal if teachers went through with the strike vote. The board also refused to meet with teachers until Oct. 22, according to Howenstine.

"I hope you can see what their strategy is — they're sitting back and waiting to see what we'll do," he said.

O'NEILL SAID the teachers need to sway only three more board members to bring a settlement to the contract dispute. He refused to name board members supporting the teachers.

The contract dispute has been aggravated by a series of newsletters to parents from the EMEA and Dist. 63 board. EMEA members criticized the board's hiring of a professional negotiator as "cutting off our last real contact with the board."

The EMEA communications also note that Board Pres. Irene Luck and board member Jerry Abern, teachers in Park Ridge and Evanston, work under the same type of contract the East Maine teachers are asking for.

In response, the board has questioned the EMEA's "sincerity and good faith," citing teacher picketing of school board meetings and open houses.

School news notes

As part of the Riley School Parent Awareness Program, parents of third-grade students will be invited to attend a curriculum presentation Oct. 25.

The session, scheduled for 3:45 p.m., is intended to explain the educational program at the school. It will be the third session of the program.

Similar presentations on programs in the upper grades will be offered for parents in November.

Tomorrow, all first and second grade classes at Stevenson School will travel to Green Meadows Farm in southeastern Wisconsin.

The children will tour the farm, go on a horse-drawn hayride, pony rides, feed and pet the more than 300 farm animals and pick their own pumpkins.

The farm also features picnic areas, nature trails, a spring-fed swimming pond and beach and a campfire circle.

Eighth grade cheerleaders at Holmes Junior High School were recently named. They are Charmaine Klein, Alyssa Cole, Kim Cecchi, Alicia Weissense, Rose Abraham, Jeri Wallace and Denise Dunsmere.

Students at Twain School have joined several other local schools in collecting Campbell's Soup labels to be redeemed for equipment for the school.

Labels from all regular size soup cans and Chunky Soup are needed and may be deposited at the school at 515 E. Merle Ln., Wheeling.

A group of 22 students at London Junior High School have been selected to participate in the Illinois Music Educators Association District VII Conference and Festival Nov. 3 in Wheaton.

The students will join other musicians chosen from junior high schools in six northeastern Illinois counties in presenting a public concert.

Stereo equipment, a camera and two men's watches were apparently stolen Saturday or Sunday from a Buffalo Grove residence.

Police said the items, valued at $475, were taken from the Carol Potter residence, 319 Cherrywood Rd., between 2:30 p.m. Saturday and 9:30 a.m. Sunday. Entry was gained, police said, by breaking a second floor patio door window.

6 firemen escaped death in Saturday blaze cave-in

by STIRLING MORITA

Six Hoffman Estates firefighters escaped injury and possibly death Saturday when the roof of the Service Merchandise Inc. store collapsed because of an intense fire.

"It was the most dangerous situation we've had fighting a fire in town," said Deputy Fire Chief Ed Kalasa. "Everyone in the center of the roof for some reason moved back, and then the center caved in."

He added that when the center of the roof fell, the flames shot up "like a volcano."

Kalasa had climbed back to the roof to warn the firefighters that something seemed to be wrong with the one-story building in the Golf-Rose Shopping Center. "Nobody knew why they moved back from the center."

"The same thing happened below," the deputy chief recalled. "There were about ten men in the center of the building, and the heat was intense so they backed up. Then the roof caved in. It was a good thing they moved because they could have been caught under it."

KALASA SAID the steel-bar joist roof was dangerous in this situation because

"they gave no warning when they're going to give in."

He added that the steel was expanded by the heat and when the water struck and cooled the supports, they drew back, causing the roof to collapse.

The roof caved in about 5 a.m. an hour after firefighters had arrived on the scene. The men on the roof were chopping holes to ventilate the flaming building, Kalasa said.

Kalasa said when he went to the back of the building to supervise the men, he saw the building starting to shake. He clambered back up the ladder to warn the firefighters, and an air horn was sounded twice to attract the busy men's attentions.

"IT FELT LIKE there was a whip in the roof," the deputy chief added. "I could feel it starting to shake."

The roof caved in, and flames gushed up. The men were quickly evacuated down the ladders.

"When I got down, I started to count heads," Kalasa said. "There was one volunteer fireman missing. We couldn't find him, and I thought he went down with the roof."

"But he was outside the building, just not in sight," Kalasa said.

3-H project plans to be reviewed

Plans for a new development on 67.3 acres on McHenry Road will be presented to the Wheeling Zoning Board tonight.

The 3-H Building Corp., developers of the project, are asking that zoning on the property be changed from a residential to a planned development designation. The property in question was recently annexed into the village, and is located between Whippletree Village and Cedar Run.

The zoning board is also scheduled to review a request to rezone property at 29 S. Milwaukee Ave. for an office building.

Earlier this year, the property was rezoned for an apartment building designed for the elderly.

Developers of the property, however, abandoned the senior citizens housing project, saying it was no longer a profitable venture. They are now proposing an office building, which they said is more suitable for the area.

A third hearing will review a sign variation requested for 115 S. Milwaukee Ave. by Schlagen Real Estate.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Diabetes tough on the faith healers

Diabetes is once more proving to be the Waterloo of the faith healers.

In August there were deaths in both Canada and California due to faith-inspired throwing away of insulin.

In Toronto, Ont., potential faith healer Mark Cowan told a coroner's jury that he had hoped to use his 20-year-old wife as an exhibit of a "miracle cure" and went on to dispose of her insulin.

In Barstow, Calif., Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Parker were jailed on charges of manslaughter after they withdrew insulin from their 11-year-old son.

The Parkers then joined some 200 other people in staging a ghoulish delight in the local funeral home. They attracted national attention by refusing to allow the boy to be buried for six days because, they assured everyone, his resurrection was imminent. (The boy was finally buried and the parents are currently held in lieu of $10,000 bail.)

THE PARKERS contend that they were told by a visiting evangelist at the Barstow Assembly of God, that their boy had been healed of his diabetes. But the Rev. William Robertson, the denomination's Southern California District superintendent, told this column that Parker, months earlier, had become involved in a furious argument regarding the denomination's failure to share his belief in demon possession, and that the visiting preacher had not preached on faith healing, had never told the Parkers that their boy was healed, and had only prayed for healing.

"We believe in divine healing that does not endorse or condone throwing away of lifesaving medications merely because the individual is presumed healed," Rev. Robertson said.

It is, of course, easy for the emotional people who jam faith healers' services to misunderstand the sermon. This kind of misunderstanding may well have been the reason why on July 5, 1969, diabetic Wanda Beach, 37, threw away her insulin and died after telephoning her mother to explain that she had been "completely cured" by a traveling faith healer named Oral Roberts.

Lutheran General receives grant

A $25,000 grant has been made to the Rehabilitation Center of Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, by Lutheran Brotherhood, Minneapolis-based fraternal insurance society. The grant was announced by Woodrow Langhaug, Lutheran Brotherhood president.

The funds will be used to train professionals and paraprofessionals in the field of alcoholism treatment. It is the second grant made by Lutheran Brotherhood for this purpose.

"The trustees deeply appreciate the concern of Lutheran Brotherhood in helping to meet the critical shortage of people trained in alcoholism treatment.

The society is to be commended for its perceptive leadership in this field," said Dr. N. M. Nessel, president of Lutheran General Hospital.

The Rehabilitation Center is a major treatment and training center in the field of alcoholism. To date more than 70 physicians, medical residents, nurses, social workers, chaplains, counselors and industrial personnel have received training at the center.

With nine million alcoholics, alcoholism is one of the major health problems in the nation. Lutheran General is one of the national leaders in the field of alcoholism treatment and training.

producer (having deserted the Pentecostal Holiness Church for the Methodists), was not available for comment at Oral Roberts University or, according to staffers there, anywhere else. None of the staffers at this glittering campus (the pride of Tulsa) knew anything about Wanda Beach.

There is no question, however, about misunderstanding of the late faith healer A. A. Allen, who wrote: "The gift of healing needs no help from doctors, for it is all-powerful to remove a cancer or a tumor." (Rev. Allen died in 1970, in a San Francisco hotel room, of what Coroner Henry Turkel diagnosed as "acute alcoholism.")

Then in March, 1954, Van Nuys, Calif., school teacher Cora Louise Sutherland died of tuberculosis after having exposed thousands of school children to the disease because she had refused, as a Christian Scientist, to take an X-ray.

Instead, reported Time magazine, she resorted to a Christian Science practitioner who charged her $65 per month to "treat" her with prayer and readings from Mary Baker Eddy.

IT REMAINS A mystery why this lethal perversion of the freedom of religion is tolerated in the same nation where one must spend years of study to obtain a physician's license, and is forever thereafter threatened with malpractice suits.

To contend that freedom of religion is at stake is to suggest that it would be permissible for religious fanatics to revive the worship of Molech (II Kings 23:10) and its insistence on burning children to death as an act of human sacrifice.

Such a horrible fate was, of course, not the intent of the Parkers of Barstow. But like Cora Louise Sutherland, young Wesley is no less dead as the victim of what should be recognized and prosecuted as miracle malpractice.

Area cross country highlights

Maine West runners win; Jackson 3rd, Hersey 4th in Mattoon meet

by LARRY EVERHART
Cross Country Editor

Neither Hersey nor Arnie Jackson of Schaumburg reached their goals at the Mattoon cross country invitational Saturday, biggest of three such large meets that day involving Herald area teams. Yet coaches of both teams figured it was a good learning experience at Mattoon, where Palatine was also entered.

In the other big news in the Libertyville Invitational, upstart Maine West, which has already pulled off an upset or two, made waves by nipping Fremd, which has dominated the strong Mid-Suburban League and figures to be one of the best in the state. Prospect was the other area team.

A third large meet involving Herald area entries was at Addison Trail, where four teams not among the MSL leaders — Wheeling, Elk Grove, Rolling Meadows and Forest View — occupied the last four spots among nine teams.

To elaborate, in order . . . Hersey was fourth in a 38-team, 200-runner field at Mattoon, nearly 100 points behind winner Riverside-Brookfield, always prominent on the state scene. Glenbard West was second, Oak Park third and host Mattoon fifth. Palatine, the other area team, ended up eighth.

Individually, Jackson did not win for the first time in any meet this year. R-B's touted Mike Marks won in 13:30 on a very fast three-mile course (on the street) and an unheralded Mount Vernon boy, Mike Clark, was second ahead of Jackson's 14:02.

"That was Jackson's best three-mile time ever, but it was a very fast course," said coach Denny Garber. "The state meet is still three weeks away, and that's what Arnie is working for. It was good just to see where he stands. Probably three of the best four runners in the state were there. We're not upset. We're going to work on his speed this week and start the fine tuning."

Hersey again had its season-long problem of not enough depth after the top three runners, although that trio did a fine job. Ron Stepani was eighth in the huge collection, Jay McCarthy 12th and Chris Cooney 21st. But Hersey's next two men were 65th and 78th.

"I think all the kids learned a lot, though," said Huskie coach Larry Travis. "Some learned to go out faster, others slower. It should help us later on."

Palatine also had three strong performances but not enough balance. Paul Kearns was 13th, Dave Tehle 19th and John Thullen 33rd.

Another big name present was Bill Fritz of Glenbard West, state champion in the mile run last spring after beating superstar Craig Virgin. A showdown had been expected between Jackson and Fritz, but the latter was only sixth — after having beaten the winner, Marks, earlier on Marks' home course.

At Libertyville, where 11 teams competed, Maine West rebounded from a decisive (23-36) dual loss to Conant earlier in the week to stun Fremd. The Vikings had lost only one other meet all year, and that was the Peoria Invitational, which included most of the top teams in the state. The Warriors' victory margin was a scant four points.

"We had to be good, of course, to beat Fremd," said coach Bill Barringer, "but we've looked good before, too. We've beaten Maine East and won the Ridgeview and Wanegon Invitational."

Fremd coach Ron Menely said that Barringer had said his team was especially fired up after the Conant loss. "They were so close they could reach out and touch each other," he said.

"We have no excuses. It was just the same old problem of not all putting it together on the same day. I think we're finding out some of our problems now, though."

The balanced Warriors had Joe Paul sixth, Paul Frost seventh, Kevin Skahan ninth, Greg Klebe 11th, Glen Oland 13th and Brian Dunavani 25th.

Individual winner was Dena Erdall of Wanegon (14:24) followed by Paul Hensen of Glenbard East and Chuck Ruppenthal of Fremd (14:39). The course was 2.8 very muddy, hilly yards and runners were frequently falling down.

Fremd's other scorers were Dave Scott with fourth (14:53), Will Fieldhouse eighth, Paul Kinyon 17th, John Miller 13th, Geoff Bolton 19th and Jim Galls 29th.

Prospect had Jeff Chamberlain 12th, Rich Reithal 24th, Greg Toblax 26th, Mike Skelton 30th and Rich Podgorny 31st. The Knights finished fifth.

In the sophomore division, Hoffman Estates' fine group ruled ahead of Maine West and Fremd. The Hawks, still a two-year school, were led by Steve Lind and Sam Cox with first and second. In frosh running, Fremd dominated.

At Addison Trail, it wasn't a day for local teams in a nine-team field. Fenton and Addison were one-two. Wheeling was sixth, Elk Grove seventh, Rolling Meadows eighth and Forest View ninth.

Best area individuals were both from Elk Grove — Dave Jackson with 14th and Dave Dill 15th. Wheeling was led by Augie Zicarelli (28), Rich Reese (30) and Jim Leeper (31). Meadows' leaders were Mike Scott (33) and Jim Huddleston (38). Tony Hess and Steve Goerscher paced Forest View.

In frosh-soph action, Forest View was second, Rolling Meadows fourth and Elk Grove fifth. Mike Ham's second and Steve Hilliger's 11th topped the Falcons.

In late duals last week, St. Viator trimmed Carmel 23-22 and Prospect lost to Glenbard West 17-47. For St. Viator, Bob Kohn won in 18:16 for three miles, nipping by one second Ron Sitz, who had led most of the way. Other Lions in order were Mark Nelles, Marty Lechleider, Jim Garcia and Ron Driske.

Chamberlain and Podgorny paced Prospect with third and fifth.

Prospect owns 11-0 record

Mid-Suburban golf test today at Palatine Hills

Prospect golfers have one foot in the winner's circle as the result of surviving the Mid-Suburban League's fall golf dual-meet schedule with a perfect 11-0 record.

The Knights, though, are expected to be pressed by Fremd and Hersey who tied for second at 9-2 when the 12-team league tees off for the conference meet at Palatine Hills this morning at 7:45.

The final dual-meet standings carry one-half the weight of the entire season in order of finish, but the conference meet is also worth one-half toward the overall finish.

Arlington, Fremd and Palatine — all legitimate challengers for the golf derby — should hold a slight advantage since the showdown will transpire over their home course.

The linksmen will get a severe test at Palatine Hills. The course is 6,520 yards in length and carries a regulation par 36-36-72. Water is a definite factor on the sixth, seventh, ninth, 15th, 16th, 17th and 18th holes. The greens are well trapped although the fairways are relatively unobstructed by trees.

The players will be "shotgunned" off every tee to insure rapid play. Each squad will play seven golfers and count the top four scores toward the final standings.

Hersey is the defending champion, having dominated the proceedings last spring. The Huskies' Bruce Conroy is the one to beat individually after his strong showing all fall.

The consistent hitter averaged a remarkable 33 shots per meet during the dual engagements and was his team's medalist on four occasions.

Principals, IHSAA meet at Towers

Former Miss America Marilyn Van Derbur, an avid sportswoman and an accomplished skier and swimmer, will deliver the main address at the annual Illinois High School Association (IHSAA) meeting Tuesday at the noon luncheon at the Arlington Towers, Arlington Heights.

The annual meeting will be held in conjunction with the Illinois Principal's Association convention, which runs through Wednesday. (IHSAA membership is composed of secondary school principals.)

Miss Van Derbur will discuss "Motivation in the Schools."

Following her address, IHSAA Executive Secretary Harry Fitzhugh will conduct a discussion of association activities. Among the topics of interest, based on reports of the recent Town Meetings, will be the following:

- 1974 Football Playoffs.
- Future of girls interscholastic athletics.
- Two-class State Wrestling Tournament.

• Progress of the association's new headquarters building now under construction in Bloomington-Normal.

A distinguished group of speakers will be present for the IPA Convention, including:

- Gov. Daniel Walker, who will address the convention at the Tuesday banquet.
- Sam Levenson, educator-television personality set for the Monday afternoon general session.
- Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, president of San Francisco State College, set for the Wednesday morning general session.
- Dr. B. Frank Brown, chairman, National Commission of the Reform of Secondary Education.

BRUCE CONROY

Hawks 4th at Milwaukee

As they have been in every meet, Mike DeLaBruere and Tom Fath provided highlights for Harper College's cross country team as it took fourth in the 15-team Milwaukee Invitational Saturday. DeLaBruere took the individual crown and Fath was third.

"Those two did a real fine job but I was a little disappointed in the team as a whole," said coach Bob Nolan. "We beat Oakton earlier but they finished ahead of us this time."

"I knew Mike would do well there, but I didn't know Tom would have that good a time. He ran a tremendous race." DeLaBruere easily set a new course record with 20:50 for four miles and Fath's 21:19 was just three seconds over the old record. Site was Washington Park (no, not the race track) and the terrain was hilly and challenging.

Harper's other runners among almost 100 were John Jones with 23rd, Jim Simons with 42nd and John Bone with 65th.

DuPage, winner of the team title, will visit Harper Wednesday and put the Hawks' dual-meet winning streak of 30 in real jeopardy (they last lost three years ago). "They'll be tough, but our first two guys can beat anybody," said Nolan. "They have the balance we don't have."

The same teams will again stage a showdown in the Skyway Conference meet Nov. 2, which should also be close. DeLaBruere was the individual champ last year. The Region meet, which qualifies qualifiers for the national runoffs, is Oct. 27.

Sudden death playoff decides 6th Mount Prospect golf event

Following the script of the first five years, the recent sixth Annual Mount Prospect Open Golf Tournament ended with two four-man teams tied at 22 under par.

Sudden death play between the two teams decided the winner and it took a regulation par 5 net 4 on the first extra hole by Ed Nixon to win for his team.

Nixon and his team held a six stroke lead with nine holes to play when a team made up of Mike McDonald, Ron Reichl, Ward Oliver and Bob Appleton played the final nine holes 10 under par to catch the front runners.

McDonald's team was 14 under for the day and another great closing rush by a team made up of Don Campbell, Norm Halvorsen, Joe Urban and Ernie Mehlman fel lone stroke short at 21 under par. Campbell's team played the final nine holes nine under par.

The event was played at Mount Prospect Country Club for the first time in its six year history and it is anticipated that future tournaments will be played on the course.

Members of the winning team were Ed Nixon, Ken Willert, Tom Weber and Bill Bak, all Mount Prospect residents.

Closest to the pin awards went to Norm Denzinger on No. 7 (4 feet) and to Bill Bak on 2 (6½ feet). On Sunday, both Mike McDonald on 7 and Ken Streit on 12 were six feet from the pin.

A total of 68 players participated in the 36 hole event.

Larry Everhart

Why not hire sports shrink?

ANY PSYCHIATRIST, if he wanted to, could easily keep himself busy for life just in the world of sports alone.

No matter what the sport, there always seems to be plenty of questions.

Why do the Cubs always fade in the stretch? What happens to the Bulls every year in the playoffs? Why can't the San Francisco 49ers, even with sometimes superior teams, ever beat the Los Angeles Rams? Why can't the Detroit Lions ever beat the Minnesota Vikings?

Why do college football teams sometimes get psyched out when playing Notre Dame? Why do Little Leaguers sometimes cry when they strike out? Why are some afraid of the ball? Why was Margaret Court so far off her normal game against Bobby Riggs? What makes golfers miss six-inch puts when there's a little money on it? Why is each succeeding howling frame tougher to get a strike when you're working on a perfect game?

All right, you get the point. Psychological questions are endless in sports.

Mostly people answer them with "pressure" or "they choke" or "psyche out." But is it that simple? Is it just a matter of concentration or of some people naturally being affected more by nerves than others? If so, why and what can be done to overcome psychological barriers?

It seems that the psychological aspect of sports is just as important as the physical side, which gets more attention. Any football or basketball team, even in high school, has a competent trainer and pro franchises even have a team doctor who are expert orthopedic surgeons. Also from the physical standpoint, teams spend hours, days and weeks getting in shape before a season and concentrate on what formations and plays to use, etc.

Yet, how often do we see a team psychologist? About as often as the 49ers beat the Rams or the Lions beat the Vikings.

Why is it that this all-important aspect of a game is pretty much overlooked? Sure, coaches are always talking about being up or down mentally, and about desire, determination, momentum, pride, and all the rest, and explaining victories or losses that way.

But it's like Mark Twain said about the weather. Everybody talks about it but . . .

We've all heard the phrase, "This team doesn't need a coach. It needs a psychiatrist." Especially in connection with the Cubs in recent years.

It's usually said as a joke, but there may be something to it.

Last spring, the Herald's Paul Logan wrote a column about ways in which high school teams in different sports psyche opponents out. There are as many different methods to do so as there are coaches you ask, and they will freely admit that it is done.

But it's a shame to lose because of such tactics, even though they are a part of sport, just as it would be a shame to lose just because your team isn't in as good physical condition as the enemy. It's only a matter of preparation. If you're going to lose, it should be only because the other team is better.

So why can't a psychologist be hired for each team? The first answer to that would be cost, but I'll bet plenty of amateurs would be willing to work cheap and could be of help. And even if it does cost, money is paid to trainers and coaches. As it is now, coaches double as psychologists. But they have enough other things to worry about.

For the pros, money shouldn't be that much a concern. In a multi-million-dollar operation, with players paid an average of $25,000 a year and sometimes over $100,000, why couldn't another $25,000 be paid for a psychologist?

In 1970, the Bears entered their final two games with a dismal 4-8 record and having lost eight of their last 10. Multi-millionaire and insurance tycoon W. Clement Stone of Chicago, who happens to be a Bear fan, was asked by coach Jim Dooley to talk to the team about positive mental attitude (PMA) the week before a game against the Packers. He did.

Need it be said that the Bears amazed everyone by destroying the Packers? They also won their last game easily, and quarterback Jack Concannon later said, "I wish Mr. Stone could have talked to us before the season."

Of course the PMA had worn off by the next season, but maybe it had something to do with those victories. I for one wouldn't mind if Stone were on the Bears' payroll.

True, coaches are concerned with psychology, from Little League on up to world champs. It's often been said that being a successful coach is three-fourths motivation or confidence-building and only one-fourth knowledge of the game and physical preparation.

Maybe that's why George Allen is so successful as a pro football coach. He spends hours off the field prodding his players verbally, probably more time than any other coach. He must be persuasive because he seems to talk more old (but still good) football players out of retirement than any other coach as soon as they've quit another team, saying they absolutely will never play again.

At least two pro teams already have seen the value of a psychiatrist and have hired one — the San Diego Chargers and Kansas City Royals. Both have improved their performances.

Maybe a few other owners will take the cue and follow suit. But probably not until the Royals or Chargers win a championship.

MID-SUBURBAN CHAMPS AGAIN. Arlington High School easily repeated as conference champion with another undefeated MSC season. The victors are, from left, kneeling: Mary Flynn, Jean Condon, Dorothy Massey, Patty Pinski, Amy Redden, Cathy Schoepke, Lori

Buffalo Grove romps again; blasts Cards

by KEITH REINHARD

Spoiling two homecomings in one weekend was a little too much to ask.

And so Arlington fell before a fired-up Buffalo Grove outfit 35-0 in a joyous encounter Saturday afternoon much to the delight of a highly partisan capacity crowd.

The previous evening the Cards had tossed a monkey wrench in Palatine's homecoming festivities with a 21-7 varsity triumph. The Bison were in no mood to follow suit, however, and they piled up 320 yards worth of offense en route to their fifth straight triumph.

The hosts had the game so wrapped up after the first half, in fact, that coach Grant Blaney let his reserve unit collect their share of the muddy turf through most of the final two quarters. There were less than four minutes remaining in the contest when the Cards spoiled Grove's shutout bid on an abortive punt attempt.

Up until that time the guests had not even dented the Bison 20-yard stripe once in the contest.

Blaney's bunch did a lot of denting in the meantime. The first time Buffalo Grove gained control of the ball they marched 93 yards in nine plays. Dave Smithers spearheading the drive with an 18-yard pass to George Bastable and a 47-yard flip to Brian Schuster.

Barry Schuster took it over from the two and Smithers booted the extra point to make it a 7-0 contest.

Six plays later Grove doubled their lead when Bastable picked off an errant Arlington pass and returned it 61 yards for a touchdown. It was his fourth interception this season.

In the second quarter John Arendall was sprung loose on a 33-yard scoring scamper, side-stepping a trio of would-be tacklers along the way. The next time Buffalo Grove had the ball Smithers ran once for 23 yards and passed to Arendall for 17 more to set up a 7-yard dive by Brian Schuster that made it a 27-0 halftime game.

Amithern was six-for-six in the passing department after zeroing in on Arendall for nine yards and Brian Schuster for 17 in a final Bison rally before halftime. Arendall then carried for the second time, on a draw, and scooted 33 yards to score again.

On the extra point attempt, a kick was faked and Arendall easily dashed around right end. He retired for the day then with three carries for 86 yards and 16 points.

In the second half both defenses knuckled down and there was no more scoring until the visitors reached the board late in the game. Card quarterback Kyle Lindquist filled the air with 29 passes and clicked on 11 of them but he also had four intercepted, including one by Ken Corchin after a couple of 18-yard completions had advanced them the furthest of the day... to the enemy 24.

The Cards tapped the Bison offense for their lone score. Dave Weber charged in to snatch the miscued punt attempt and kept on running, covering 32 yards for the tally.

Buffalo Grove hosts Fremd's junior varsity this Saturday at 2 p.m.

Dealer Auto Auctions

Many automobile professionals, at the level of the Owner, General Sales Manager, New Car Manager and mostly the Used Car Manager love "auction day" as the ritual is performed weekly in metropolitan markets.

On auction day anywhere from 500 to as many as 2,000 autos and trucks go across the "block." There they are, rows and rows of them, acres of them. In they come, often times in 2, 3 or even 4 rows simultaneously, divided into age groups.

The motors roar, loud speakers vibrate, several auctioneers "crv" at ear splitting levels. Action is everywhere. Cars are sold "outside" through agreement of seller and buyer. Cars are sold just before they get on the "block" by one party and sometimes instantly resold by the buyer. It's like stock market speculation. Last year, at 90 major auctions around America, about one million units changed hands at an average value of $1,100 for a total dollar volume of slightly over $1 billion. Over a period of a year some 75% - 80% of all units consigned are sold at these major auctions.

A man who buys must certainly know his values. "Value" publications do little good when cars are flashing across the "block" every 20-30 seconds and the bidding is often times "hot and heavy."

The first auto auction was established in Albany, New York just prior to World War II. Today all auctions, of which there are a total of 300 (these are many outside of metropolitan markets) account collectively for over 1.5 billion dollars of sales annually on over 1.5 million Fremd was third (4) with Crown (3), Dundee (2) and Crystal Lake (0).

Bals lost in the finals to Amy Bash of Barrington 6-0, 6-1, but the runnerup spot qualified her for the state finals this weekend at Arlington Heights. After receiving an opening bye, she defeated Dawn Ahlman of Dundee 6-0, 6-4 and Fremd's Tilly Riske by 6-1 scores.

Hoping to finish yesterday were Elk Grove, Glenbrook North, Elgin and Prospect districts.

We need a special grand jury

State's Atty. Bernard Carey's request for a special 18-month county grand jury has come off looking like a bid for a political hunting license to investigate Democrats.

That's unfortunate, we believe, because the state's attorney's office is in need of more investigative tools to go after the crime syndicate and corrupt political influences that have preyed on Cook County for too long.

Carey has a good case for a special jury and we urge Chief Criminal Court Judge Joseph Power to cooperate despite the political coloring that seems to have shaded the issue.

The state's attorney made a mistake by including allegations against Mayor Richard Daley and Gov. Daniel Walker's subordinates in his petition asking Judge Power to set up the special grand jury. The petition makes reference to drug traffic, gambling and other instances of alleged or suspected corruption. Surely, those things provide enough of an investigative challenge without taking on the state's two top Democrats.

Carey's point is that the county's single, over-worked grand jury is not capable of investigating the sophisticated kinds of violations involved in political corruption or organized crime activities.

The county grand jury, he notes, sits for a single month and is then dismissed. In that time, it returns an average of about 20 indictments a day for felonies that are mostly of the street-crime variety.

This is in contrast, Carey says, to the seven federal grand juries now sitting in Chicago. Their 18-month terms and lighter caseloads are designed to cope with complicated financial and white-collar crimes that can take more than a year to investigate.

Probing political corruption in Cook County never aroused much interest among Carey's predecessors, most of whom were put into office by the Democratic machine. The last one, Edward Hanrahan, freely acknowledged that he Once upon a long time ago I knew a guy who edited movies for television. That was back in the days when PG meant pregnant, not "parental guidance" because any movie was fit for the whole family to see and the only ratings were "great," "so-so" and "it stinks."

Editing in those days was strictly to make time for a commercial and Ed's job was to pick a likely place to cut a movie without ruining the plot. Common sense counted, too. For instance, it was a no-no to cut a Biblical movie in the middle of the Crucifixion scene for a commercial about hangnails, but it was okay to cut a scene where a guy was dying of thirst in the desert for a commercial about beverages because this made everybody head for the refrigerator and a cold beer. Which made the sponsor happy.

Listening to Ed talk about his job, I discovered why I could see the same movie more than once and each time it would be a little different — each film editor had his own idea of what's the right spot to cut for a commercial.

Nevertheless, I can't figure out how come I've seen "Casablanca" 18 times and have yet to hear Humphrey Bogart say, "Play it again, Sam."

There are three possible reasons for this.

Ed is retired and 18 of today's crop of young film editors don't realize the importance of that classic line.

Or Bogey never said it and his impersonators are all wrong.

Play it again, Dorothy!

Or I'm crazy watching "Casablanca" 18 times.

Right away we can eliminate that last one because I know lots of people who watch "Casablanca" every time it's shown and only one of them is crazy.

That leaves 18 guys who don't know what they're doing or a bunch of impersonators who louse up famous quotes, and one's just as likely as the other.

Dorothy Meyer

With apologies to some young people who think it's all right to leave a few things the way they've always been, I have observed that a lot of them favor change just for change's sake. To that group I can only say, "Don't mess around with Bogey."

On the other hand it's equally possible that Rick never did say, "Play it again, Sam," because people are always being misquoted. There's a theory, for instance, that Caesar may not have murmured, "Et tu, Brute," when his best friend stuck a knife in his ribs, but instead hollered, "Ooooo, that smarts." Which translates to "Ooooo, hurtibus i. 'dimus," not "Et tu, Brute."

As theories aside and back to how come I've seen "Casablanca" 18 times, I must admit I'll see it the 19th when it comes around again. I just love that final scene where Bogey watches Bergman and Henreid walk off into the fog and he says, "Ooooo, hurtibus maximus."

Local mayor criticized

On Saturday, October 6, the first day of National Respect Life Week, Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley joined mayors across the country in issuing a beautiful proclamation recognizing the fact that "we are all created by God," and urging Chicago citizens to do their part in upholding the dignity of life. Similar proclamations were issued by many suburbs, including (in our area) the mayors of Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect, Wheeling, Des Plaines and Glenview. It was an embarrassing day for the residents of Arlington Heights, however. For we, the City of Good Neighbors, bore the ignoble burden of having the only mayor, John Walsh, who was approached, but chose to ignore the declaration.

Mayor Walsh's unconcern was even more puzzling in light of the fact that the proclamation was in no way a political issue. Supported by national and local leaders of many faiths, it was instead a splendid humanitarian gesture. Most mayors had the declaration printed in their local newspapers, and then followed it with a few words of their own, urging their communities to seek out and aid those citizens and institutions most in need of their help.

I am sure that there are those residents of Arlington Heights, especially the elderly, ill, retarded and handicapped, who are aware of the anti-life forces within our society, and who wonder, uneasily, if they might become society's next "unwanted victims." A few words from our mayor, during Respect Life Week, pointing out their positive value as citizens, would have done much to assure them of our continuing respect, concern and protection.

Perhaps Mayor Walsh feels that respecting life is too "controversial" a subject with which to become involved. If so, I deeply regret his feelings. For, especially now, every human being deserves to be assured of his innate worth to society. Even retarded children — who can't vote.

Dist. 214 'tokenism' blasted

I was delighted to see Marjorie Olson's letter commenting on High School Dist. 214's claim that no one qualified for an assistant principalship could be found among the women on their staff.

It certainly put the lie to that token attempt to give equal opportunity for promotions to Dist. 214's women teachers.

I would suspect that in Marjorie's case, the school district's unwillingness to take advantage of her obvious qualifications stemmed at least in part from her record of strong commitment to the IEA and, more recently, to a homegrown alternative teachers organization.

Yet, what else should they have expected? An energetic, talented person — be they man or woman — will put their efforts in other more promising areas if the first avenue is blocked.

Some elementary school districts have been far more willing to recognize teachers' association activities as evidence of leadership that the school administration should take advantage of. Jim Hall's rise from Dist. 25 Teachers Association to the school central office staff and now Ridge School principal is but one example.

'Prevent leaf burning'

Since Governor Walker recently signed a bill prohibiting state control of leaf burning, many Illinois communities are considering removal of local leaf burning bans. This would be an unfortunate action.

Information from the Illinois Institute for Environmental Quality and the Clean Air Coordinating Committee indicates that unless local governments can be convinced to retain these bans, air quality in many areas of the state will decline and the health of Illinois residents will suffer.

Consider these facts. Smoke from burning leaves contains about 30 toxic compounds. Produced in large quantities are particulate matter, carbon monoxide and dioxide. Lesser quantities of organic compounds such as benzene, toluene, methanol and ethane are in the smoke.

Other very significant emissions are the polynuclear hydrocarbons (PNH). Some of these materials are known carcinogens and there is presently great concern over their release into the atmosphere.

In the suburbs where hundreds of thousands of pounds of leaves may be burned over a weekend, the production of these compounds may be extremely high, and the health of citizens adversely affected.

Open leaf burning represents a step backward in environmental awareness. I suggest we consider the more responsible alternative of community composting of this excellent fertilizer.

'Israel guilty of overconfidence'

by PHIL NEWSOM

After a week of the fourth Arab-Israeli war, it appears that both Israel and its best friend, the United States, may have been guilty of overconfidence.

Whether for reasons of a desire to avoid unfavorable world reaction to firing the first shot or of surprise, Israel was unprepared for the first Egyptian-Syrian blow and lost precious time in mobilizing to full strength.

It led to heavy early casualties which a nation of only a little more than 3 million can ill afford.

By the third day, Israeli communiques had lost their early optimism and taken on a somber tone.

As for the United States it appears military experts were surprised both by the sophistication of Arab tactics, particularly the Egyptians in building and maintaining bridgeheads across the Suez Canal, and the tenacity of the Arab soldiers.

Diplomatically, the United States also appeared unprepared.

When the United Nations Security Council met on Monday, the best the U.S. could offer was a suggestion that both sides retire to previous ceasefire lines. All sides rejected it.

Both sides now talk of a war of attrition which means a long and costly struggle with an increasing danger to civilian populations within the area of the struggle and to world peace in general.

Richard M. Nixon

One-sided as the 1967 war was it still provides a basis of comparison.

In six days it cost the Israelis 670 soldiers killed in action and 2,563 wounded.

Jordan reported 15,000 soldiers and civilians killed.

Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser admitted the loss of 80 per cent of his equipment and the deaths of 10,000 soldiers and 1,500 officers.

With admitted heavy losses, it seems probable Israeli casualties already have surpassed the 1967 figures. If Israeli dead totaled 1,000, for example, it would be the equivalent to 65,000 American soldiers killed on the basis of population.

As the war entered the attrition stage, the question of resupply became of paramount importance. Both the United States and the Soviet Union moved to protect their respective clients. Business Today

by LEROY POPE

NEW YORK — The invasion of university campuses by business men as administrators or as professors in the business schools has helped a mounting attack on the cherished institution of tenure.

Used to the harsh competition for executive jobs in the business world, these new administrators and professors tend to see academic tenure as a refuge for lazy and incompetent professors and as a roadblock against innovation, progress and efficiency in the academic world.

Tenure is the system by which a professor who has served a certain number of years gets a lifetime employment contract which can't be broken even if everybody from the president of the university to the gymnasium janitor knows he's a doddering has-been. It's tough to get rid of him even if his personal life is not what it should be.

OF COURSE, tenure wasn't developed to create securities. The system was designed to preserve academic freedom, to keep professors from being fired by or living in fear of tyrannical administrators and the interference of predatory politicians or powerful alumni and other pressure groups.

The coming of the business man to the campus is not the only reason tenure is under attack.

Some professors and many college presidents always have looked somewhat askance at tenure. President John R. Silber of Boston University calls it "a relic of the devil to let sloth into the world." Chancellor Maurice Mitchell of the University of Denver says, "Tenure protects mediocrity, cripples many departments, stifles students and fails to contribute to academic freedom."

BUT PROF. George Blake, the noted physicist who works for Xerox Corp., said tenure's revocation "would sound the death knell of free universities," and Pres. Kingman Brewster Jr. of Yale said, "Boldness would suffer if the research and scholarship of a mature faculty were to be subject to periodic scorekeeping on pain of dismissal if they did not score well." Brewster insisted that very few professors attain full tenure unless they richly deserve it.

In the past many distinguished professors never sought tenure. They preferred to change universities every few years, moving around much of the world, seeking new contacts and fresh ideas.

But in a booklet just out, entitled "Personnel Management in Higher Education," John D. Millett, former chancellor of Ohio's Board of Regents, explains that tight budgets and a tight job market for college teachers have forced a big change. Millett says college professors now tend to see their careers as necessarily tied to a single university rather than to their academic field as in the past.

MILLETT SAID this has forced universities and colleges to increase the proportion of their faculties who enjoy tenure to an undesirable degree and that, in turn, is causing younger faculty members to revolt against the whole idea of tenure. The younger instructors are turning to the idea of unionization which can force earlier retirement of tenured professors and increase advancement opportunities.

Most academic experts don't expect tenure to disappear but they do expect changes — that tenure will be made subject to review periodically or even limited to 10 or 15 years.

Necessity is the mother of 'creative financing'

Home loans taking new directions

by LEA TONKIN

Time was, when a family in the $15,000-plus income range had stashed away a 10 per cent down payment on a home, they'd land a mortgage on the first try. Now the market has changed. What's loosely described as "creative financing" is coming into play as home buyers expand their horizons beyond the traditional savings and loan or bank financing.

Specifically, creative financing could mean borrowing money from Uncle Harry, coming up with a little extra cash for a down payment from a loan company or credit union, going through the government-insured finance mill, downright influence peddling, buying on contract, assuming the seller's mortgage, or pleading your case as the exception to a financial institution's rules.

"We use whatever ingenuity we can, just to get them financing of some type," says Jim Duncan, vice president of the William L. Kunkel & Co., Realtors in Des Plaines. "Money is tight but we're not losing customers because of it," he said.

DUNCAN SAYS the usual route for buyers is to try first at a savings and loan association or a bank. Buyers generally need a one-third down payment, although some buyers with only 20 per cent down can get a mortgage. If you're turned down in this limited market, the next step might be Federal Housing Administration or Veterans Administration loans.

These government-backed loans not available at all lending institutions, involve extra red tape and higher interest rates. They are being used more frequently this fall than in easy financing periods, according to a number of Northwest Suburban finance experts.

"But sometimes you have to use influence," advised Duncan. "Sometimes the broker has to use his influence, or the buyer has to, or maybe the company the buyer works for. You have to be able to arrange creative financing."

"People are using all kinds of methods of financing houses," he continued. "As buying on contract, or assuming another person's loan. Customer may borrow from relatives, or the real estate firm may help out occasionally and lend some money, he said. But the money shortage is keeping many first home buyers out of the market, and it's causing the market to be extremely slow, no question about it," Duncan said.

HOUSING SALES are down this fall for the first time in two years, said Robert Starck of Robert W. Starck and Co.

Realtors in Mount Prospect. The 30 to 40 per cent down payment required by S&L's and banks is crimping the buying plans of young couples, he said, but buying on contract is another option. The contract buyer agrees to a balloon payment of the total loan amount within a year or so, when other financing has been arranged. In the meantime, payments are made to the seller but the principal is not reduced.

For buyers with a good-size down payment, Starck has established credit with a number of commercial banks. The going rate is 7.9 per cent and may include extra points (one time service charges). The average sales price for Northwest Suburban homes is approximately $43,000, Starck said.

Gere Artemenko, treasurer and general manager of United Air Lines Employees Credit Union in Elk Grove Township, said buyers are turning to less-expensive condominiums during the money crunch, or they may continue renting an apartment. "You take a person who's graduated from school, and working for a company for a salary of $15,000 to $20,000 and unless he has extremely generous parents or in-laws, he has a heck of a hard time coming up with a down payment," Artemenko said.

EMPLOYEES ARE borrowing down payment money from the credit union, using their car as collateral. Or they may gain a chattel mortgage using their household furniture as collateral. Insurance companies usually "pull in their horns" on home financing during a money squeeze, notes Artemenko, and a loan company may not offer the amount of cash that's needed.

One banker who recently opened up $2½ million for area home loans is David Shaw, president of the Woodfield Bank in Schaumburg. It only took about two weeks, and the money was entirely committed, said Shaw.

For buyers and sellers who can wait out the processing time of several weeks, VA- and FHA-backed loans are popular. According to Bill Curran of Percy Wilson Mortgage office in Schaumburg, buyers must qualify by income levels, for the loans. The maximum VA loan is $50,000, and the maximum FHA loan is $33,000. The interest rate is 8½ per cent, plus an extra ½ per cent insurance for FHA mortgages. Percy Wilson is granting only FHA and VA loans right now. When the money becomes more plentiful, hopefully in 3 to 4 months, "everyone will offer conventional, non-government-backed loans again," Curran said.

Economy talk topic at accountants' meet

The outlook for the economy will be discussed by guest speaker Edward Boss Jr. at the Thursday meeting of the Northwest Suburban Chapter, National Association of Accountants.

Boss is vice president in the bond department of Chicago's Continental Bank. He's served in a number of positions at the bank, first as economic analyst, and later as assistant and associate economist. Boss was elected vice president in June, 1973.

The meeting will be held at the O'Hare Inn South at Mannheim and Irving Park roads. It will begin with a social hour at 5:30 p.m. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. For information on reservations, contact Earle Kuhn at 297-2400, ext. 444.

The NAA was founded in 1919. It is the largest management accounting association in the world, with more than 64,000 members in 272 chapters. The Northwest Suburban Chapter gained its charter this year.

TRAVEL LORE

by Clare Wright, TRAVEL EDITOR

"Every time I come to O'Hare I feel like I've lost three years off my life."

The lady who snapped off that statement the other day as we pushed through the milling crowds toward our departure gate is a well-seasoned traveler.

If experienced jetters feel that way, what about the poor "once-in-a-while" tripper who finds himself or herself snaggled in the noisy muddle of the world's busiest airport?

ROY SHERWAN, well-traveled president of First-Maine Travel Agency Inc., in Des Plaines, has some hints to help ease the nerve-clanging skirmish of getting to and from the airport.

A plane passenger should plan to arrive at O'Hare at least 45 minutes before takeoff. That's rule number one in Sherwan's book.

"Say your long goodbyes and take care of all the hugs, kisses, tears, handshakes and the like at home before leaving for the airport," Sherwan recommends.

"TIPS IS good advice. Security checks make it difficult for anyone, except passengers, to reach the boarding areas. There's limited space for passengers in departure lounge areas — let alone well-meaning friends and relatives.

Sherwan also points out that police are rightly enforcing parking regulations around the departure and arrival levels. Cars left unattended are quickly towed away and motorists fined.

"Departing passengers and their luggage should go directly to the upper departure level where each airline provides skylines to assist you," Sherwan says.

THE HANDY curbside baggage checking is available unless you're taking an international flight. The normal tip for this is 50 cents a bag.

If you're driving yourself to the airport Sherwan suggests you check your baggage at the curb and then drive around the departure level to the parking garage.

Park your car as directed by the signs or attendants. Current parking rates are 50 cents for the first four hours plus a 15 cents city tax.

Just be sure you make a note of the level and section where you park.

AFTER PARKING, ride the elevator to the "terminal" level. Get off and follow the signs to the proper terminal.

It's a little confusing so look for signs naming your airline.

On the ground level of the parking garage there's a free shuttle bus which goes to all three terminals, but unless you're going to the International terminal it's faster to walk through the tunnel. The one to International isn't completed yet.

Sherwan suggests limiting carry-on baggage to the absolute minimum because all items carried on board, including ladies' purses, are subject to security inspection that can be time consuming.

Many airlines now use X-ray equipment to check carry-on baggage. Don't put cameras with film through the X-ray. If you have questions, ask the attendant.

WHEN YOU return from your trip and deplane at O'Hare, walk through the concourses to the main terminal area and take the escalator to the lower level where you can claim your baggage from the airline's baggage carousel. Make sure you have your claim checks with you. Security is strict.

If friends or relatives are picking you up, have them drive up to the lower departure area shortly after your plane arrives.

If you need help with your baggage ask a skycap in the baggage-claim area to take your luggage out and load it in the car.

If you drove to the airport yourself, have a skycap watch your luggage while you walk through the tunnel to the parking garage. Or, take the shuttle bus — baggage and all.

I'd like to add a parting bit of advice to Roy Sherwan's handy hints. Fly often. O'Hare Airport is easier to cope with the more times you go in and out of it.

Q. — Is it possible for an average tourist to visit one of the great fashion houses of Paris and see a couturier's showing?

Mrs. L. R. Palatine

A. — Yes. Shows are usually held at 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday in the great fashion houses along the avenue Montaigne, avenue George V, rue Francois or rue du Faubourg Saint-Honore. Your hotel concierge can arrange for you to attend a showing.

Q. — What's the weather in Hawaii like in January?

Mrs. W. W., Rolling Meadows

A. — Practically every month is a "best" month in this cool, tropical paradise. January is probably the coolest month, with temperatures about 67 to 72 degrees. There's a little more rain, with humidity up to about 80.

Q. — This may sound silly but my husband wants to take me on a cruise and I'm afraid of getting seasick. Any suggestions?

Mrs. B. T., Des Plaines

A. — Cruise officials tell us only about one out of 20 persons are affected by mal de mer since most cruisers today are equipped with stabilizers. However, if you're still worried, ask your physician to prescribe something. Also, when booking your cruise try to get a centrally located cabin.

Male colleagues ridiculed 'rights'

by MONICA WILCH

It's "fun and games time" in the Illinois General Assembly whenever a bill relating to women's rights is discussed. That's what Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, indignantly told area women at a recent Harper College seminar.

Mrs. Chapman, along with Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, were the speakers at the third session of Harper's Women in Politics series.

"You tend to accept the realities of your world," Mrs. Chapman said in recalling her early efforts at introducing women's rights bills in the legislature and the "giggles and locker room humor" which inevitably met them.

The important thing was to get the bills passed. And ignore the ridicule.

But no more. Mrs. Chapman described the eye-opening reaction of a colleague, Susan Catania, R-Chicago, when the latter first came into the legislature and encountered the prevailing attitude toward women.

"She was appalled — simply appalled."

INDEED, MRS. CHAPMAN asked, by what right should elected representatives, whose constituency is 53 per cent women, approach women's rights legislation with "ridicule and off-color jokes?"

And those same men who heap such indignities upon women on the floor of the House, Mrs. Chapman added, are the one "who when asked to vote for the Equal Rights Amendment say, 'Oh, I want to keep you women up on a pedestal!'"

But the tide appears to be turning, due in part to the increased activity of women on their own behalf.

"In the last couple of years, for the first time, women's groups have been coming down to Springfield to lobby," Mrs. Chapman said. "Four years ago equal rights bills went down the drain without one person testifying for them and the ultimate humiliation — no explanation of why they were killed."

MORE AND MORE women are also appearing in the legislative halls as paid lobbyists, Mrs. Chapman noted, which she said has "enabled passage of a lot of legislation in special education and mental retardation."

In addition, there are now 11 women serving as elected members of the General Assembly — some 25 per cent of the total number of women who have ever served in the Illinois legislature.

That, on the heels of the unprecedented female representation in the Illinois Constitutional Convention of 1970, spells a new beginning for the 50-year-old conception of equal rights for women, according to Mrs. Chapman. (The first Equal Rights Amendment was introduced in 1923, she noted.)

However, according to Mrs. Macdonald, her current experience as a woman legislator has been somewhat of a disillusionment compared to her experience as a delegate to Con-Con.

"Very little distinction was made of the 15 women in Con-Con, Mrs. Macdonald recalled. "We were considered as equals."

"I WAS TREATED with courtesy as a woman but I also was treated with respect for my ideas and my proposals."

"It was a convention of controversy... but partisan attitudes were totally sincere," she said.

"This spoiled me. I thought this was how government would be — that we could bitterly disagree over issues and still respect each other and go to dinner together later. This is not exactly how the General Assembly is."

Recounting her struggle, as a member of the Bill of Rights Committee, to pass an equal rights clause, Mrs. Macdonald questioned the efficacy of women's rights lobby groups at that time.

She said the reactions of the men on the committee to pressure from the women's groups had been negative and that she had decided a cooling-off period was advisable before broaching the sub-

THERE IS NOTHING funny about calling a bill to provide unemployment compensation for pregnant women a "labor bill," and Rep. Eugenia Chapman wasn't laughing when she recounted this bit of legislative humor at a Harper seminar on Women in Politics.

"THROUGH NINE months of struggle, I began to think we would never give birth to an equal rights clause," Rep. Virginia Macdonald recalled in discussing her role in the 1970 Constitutional Convention before the Harper seminar audience.

said, the lawsuit filed by ERA supporters could be decided, at least by the lower courts.

The suit asks that the "extraordinary majority" required by the Illinois Constitution to pass a federal amendment be declared in violation of the U. S. Constitution. Mrs. Chapman said she expects it ultimately will be decided in the U. S. Supreme Court.

Juniors' antique show gives way to a boutique

In this season of boutique and antique shows readers may be asking about the date of the antique show presented annually in the past by the Junior Woman's Club of Palatine.

This year the club is deviating from its antique show and instead, will stage an arts and crafts boutique next March. Booths will be rented out to all who have art or boutique items to sell. Information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Robert Stoudt at 259-5398.

The club donates proceeds from its ways and means projects to Palatine and surrounding communities in the form of scholarships, gifts to schools, Northwest Community Hospital, Buehler YMCA and other local organizations. Last year the club donated more than $4,000.

Card, game party

The Ladies Aid of Immanuel Lutheran Church, Palatine, will hold a card and game party Wednesday evening in the church, Plum Grove and Colfax, beginning at 8 p.m.

A donation of $1.25 at the door will include refreshments. Prizes have been furnished by local merchants.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: Cooking for two has its own problems, especially in the matter of small quantities of pimientos and green peppers. My solution: A can of pimientos (or a fresh green bell pepper) is cut into whatever size I find most useful, spread into a single layer on metal foil, placed on a cookie sheet and put in the freezer. In an hour (no longer or freezer burn results) the food becomes dehydrated, the baking sheet is removed and the diced peppers and/or pimientos are immediately transferred to plastic containers with tight-fitting tops. Because these are frozen in individual bits, in diced or cubed form, and immediately packaged and put in the freezer, they are available for an requirement — be it for a half-teaspoon full or two table-spoonfuls. — Mimi Kearns

Dear Dorothy: I got a gloxinia plant which was full of blossoms, but shortly after they fell off and there is nothing left but the foliage. Is there anything I can do to make it bloom again? — Mrs.

Mary Colner
One problem might be that you bought a plant grown in the controlled temperature of a greenhouse. These don't always do well when they come out. And, for another, you may have been overwatering it. Try letting the plant go dormant by reducing the water and replanting it a month or two hence.

Dear Dorothy: Noticed your rather discouraging advice on making soap. I've made all our soap for the past 50 years. Since my family is mostly gone and I no longer have plenty of extra grease, I buy lard. It makes lovely soap. You can buy the exact amount needed at the time you want it and the soap is well worth the relatively small work involved in mixing the ingredients. — Mrs. R.G.A.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Luau precedes a rose garden wedding

Following a Hawaiian luau and their rose garden wedding and reception, John Hopkins Kehe of Arlington Heights and Virginia Reid McCormick of La Jolla, Calif., honeymooned at a California ranch.

The luau, held poolside at the Del Coronado Hotel in Coronado, Calif., was hosted by John's parents, the John Henry Kehe, 533 N. Highland, and was held the evening before the wedding. John and Virginia, daughter of the Lynde DuPuy McCormicks of La Jolla, were married Sept. 15 in the rose gardens of the Darlington House in La Jolla, and the buffet reception for 100 guests was held in the patio area of the garden.

Following a week at Ailsa Ranch near Solvang, the newlyweds are now residing in a Santa Monica apartment.

JOHN, A GRADUATE of Arlington High School, met his bride while studying at Principia College, Elmhurst, Ill. Virginia graduated from Principia and John received his B.F.A. from the Art Center College of Design in Los Angeles. He is now with the art department of United Artists Records, Los Angeles.

For the 4 p.m. double ring service Virginia chose an Elizabethan gown in ivory silk inset with Val lace. Her veil was of Belgian lace, and she carried a cascade of white roses.

Matron of honor was her cousin, Mrs. Robert Thomas of New York City who wore a gown of hunter green chiffon and carried a mixed bouquet of garden flowers. Christina, 4, and Megan Griffith, 6, La Jolla, were flower girls dressed in identical long, white gowns embroidered with flowers. They carried white baskets with rose petals.

AFTER SPENDING the summer in Australia with a Principia study group, J. Andrew Kehe returned just in time to be best man at his brother's wedding.

Ushers were the bride's brother, Lynde McCormick III of Boston, Mass., Peter Hanson, cousin of the groom from San Francisco, Ronald Mangelsdorf, Mount Prospect, and Ross Anderson, San Diego. Preceding the service Lynde McCormick III sang "The Wedding Song" and accompanied himself on the guitar.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hopkins Kehe

Registration expected in two weeks

Vernon Township Library Service planning its debut

Members of the various committees concerned with the proposed Vernon Township Library District are continuing to work at getting the service out to the people.

Officials of the registration committee are expected to release times, dates and places for sign-up sometime today. They hope to start the registration within two weeks.

Meanwhile, another committee is working on a survey to present to residents, to determine community attitude toward a library. It is not known when the survey will be ready.

ALSO EXPECTED in the next few weeks is the final approval for $75,000 in project plus funds from the Illinois State Library Advisory Board. The funds are expected to be approved by Secretary of State Michael Howlett within the next 10 days.

A spokesman for Howlett said yesterday that there is a 90 per cent chance the funds will be approved. He said the state has enough money to provide for at least one year of the funding.

The $75,000 comes from an assessment of $3 per resident in the library's demonstration area, which includes Lake County Buffalo Grove residents. It will come through the North Suburban Library System, which will act as trustee for the library district.

Vernon Township has also earmarked $23,000 in federal funds for the newly proposed district. That money will come from federal revenue sharing funds

Lake County poll early next year

Residents of the Lake County portion of Buffalo Grove can look forward to a poll in January or early February to see in which library district they would like to be included — Wheeling or Vernon Township.

The poll, to be taken by the North Suburban Library System, is reportedly just in the planning stage at this time. A spokesman for the NSLS said yesterday the system is just beginning to work on the mechanics of the survey.

"We don't even have a library in Vernon so we have to wait until one starts servicing the people," he said. Once the service starts in Lake County the residents will be asked to compare the two districts and choose one.

Following the survey, a referendum will be sponsored next spring to officially make Vernon Township a district and decide its official boundaries.

which come to the township during the last half of this year. The district should receive the money in 1974.

All money collected by the district will be used for its programs. Plans call for a demonstration area to be housed in a classroom at Stevenson High School in Prairie View. Plans also call for a bookmobile that will travel throughout the district.

ACCORDING TO officials, five tentative sites have been chosen for bookmobile stops. They are:

- Two days at Kildeer Countryside School in Long Grove.
- One day at Willow Grove school in Buffalo Grove.

One day at Aptakisic Trip School.

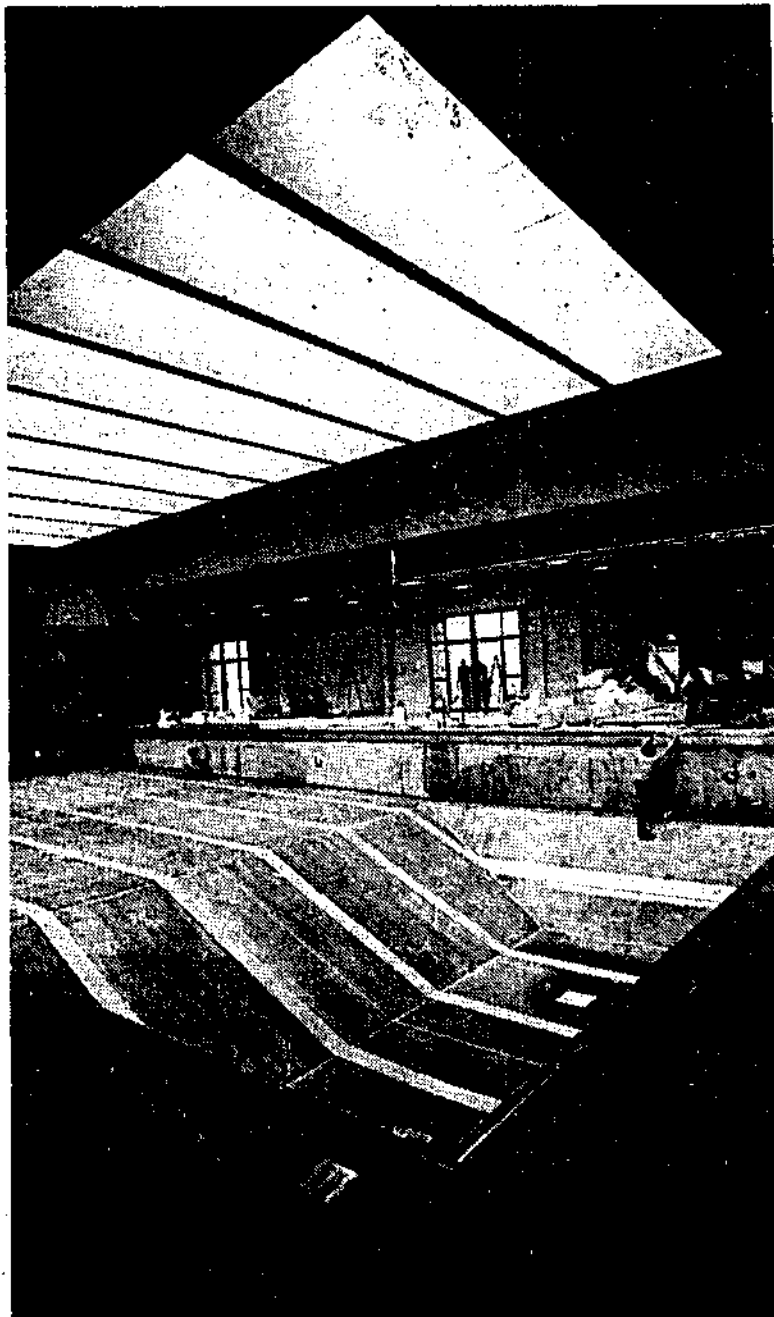

- Two days at Sprague School in Lincolnshire.

THE COMMITTEE in charge of bookmobile operations is also trying to decide on whether to keep the bookmobile open one-half day on Saturdays or Sundays. The survey to be presented residents is reportedly structured to find out the needs of residents in terms of more than just books.

According to Justin Fishbein, chairman of the library steering committee, it is the opinion of all the committee members that a library is more than just books. He said it includes audio-visual materials, records, tapes and other community services.

Fishbein also said the district has received a donation of 2,000 books from the Highland Park Library District to help Vernon get its district started.

He added that once the programs of the district get started there will be need for volunteers to help with clerical work. Fishbein said anyone interested should contact Mrs. Alice Moody of Lincolnshire.

Aqua Dome opening set for Oct. 27

The Buffalo Grove Park District is still looking at Saturday, Oct. 27, as the opening day for swim classes to begin in the new Aqua Dome swimming pool. The pool is located inside Buffalo Grove High School.

Registration for the programs filled all beginning and advanced beginning swim classes last Saturday. A few openings remain, however, in the intermediate and senior swim classes as well as the junior lifesaving program.

Anyone wishing to join the programs may do so by signing up at the Park District office, 150 Raupp Blvd., between 9 a.m. and noon daily.

ASIDE FROM structured programs the district will also sponsor open swim programs. Officials are not sure when this program will begin.

The schedule for the program is as follows:

- Sunday, 1 to 5 p.m., general public swimming.
- Monday, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., Recreation swimming, adults only, 21 or older.
- Tuesday, 6:30 to 8 p.m., district swim team practice.
- Wednesday, 9 to 11 p.m., pool available for rental.

- Thursday, 6:30 to 8 p.m., district swim team practice; 8 to 9:30 p.m. general public swimming.

- Friday, 7 to 9:30, general public swimming; 9:30 to 10:30 p.m., pool available for rental.

- Saturday, 2 to 5 and 7 to 9 p.m., general public swimming; 5 to 7 p.m., district swim team practice.

The pool will also be available for rental on Sunday evenings. However, specific times have not been released.

Officials are waiting to start all programs until the Aqua Dome is completely finished. A tentative date of this Saturday has been set for the opening but officials are not sure contractors will make that date. The pool was originally scheduled to open on Sept. 1.

WORKMEN CONTINUE to press for an October opening of the Aqua Dome swimming pool in Buffalo Grove High School. The pool was originally scheduled to open Sept. 1, but construction delays have put it behind almost two months. School and park district officials are hoping to open the pool in the next few weeks.

BEING A "DUMB" frosh has some compensations. Mary Jo Stubing (left), whose costume was judged tops among the oddly dressed freshmen roaming the halls of Sacred Heart of Mary High School Friday, won a Donny Osmond puzzle as her queenly prize. Congratulating her is fellow freshman Adrian Taylor (right). The dress-up day for freshmen was part of freshmen initiation held last week.

In Arlington Heights

4 head-on victims still hospitalized

Four people remain hospitalized after a head-on, two-car collision in Arlington Heights Friday night at Fairview Lane and Arlington Heights Road.

Scott Campbell, 20, of 382 Lincoln Terr., Buffalo Grove, was listed in serious, but improving, condition at Northwest Community Hospital yesterday. Arlington Heights police said Campbell, driver of one car, suffered multiple cuts, broken legs and a collapsed lung.

A spokesman for the hospital said Campbell was still in the intensive-care unit.

His passenger, Michael S. Murray, 23, of 228 Inverrary Ln., Deerfield, was removed from the serious list, according to the hospital. Murray sustained a skull fracture and chest injuries, police said.

The driver of the second car, Harry Lawrence, 17, of 450 Navajo Tr., Buffalo Grove, was listed in fair condition with head injuries and a broken jaw, the hospital said.

Lawrence's passenger, 15-year-old Kimberly Schroeder, of 2627 Ridge Ave.,

Arlington Heights, was listed in good condition with head injuries, according to hospital reports.

Arlington Heights police said the accident occurred when Campbell's car was apparently traveling on the wrong side of the road.

Language students plan bicycle outing

A group of about 50 foreign language students at Adlai Stevenson High School in Prairie View are planning a bike hike and cookout Sunday.

The group will leave Stevenson at 10 a.m. and ride to nearby Daniel Wright Woods. The cookout will feature a variety of foreign foods including German thuringers, Mexican chorizos, and French fondue.

A soccer game is set for 1:30 p.m. between the German, French and Spanish clubs.

Interested spectators are invited to attend the outing.

KATHY O'DONOGHUE, a senior, was crowned 1973 homecoming queen last Friday at Adlai Stevenson High School in Prairie View. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. O'Donoghue of Lincolnshire.

Expect delay in park development

It probably will be next fall before most recreation facilities are installed at the new Dist. 96 Twin Groves School Park, although the park district is scheduled to receive the deed to the five-acre site in the next few weeks.

The land adjoining the school intended for a park is to be donated to the village by Levitt & Sons, Inc., developers of the surrounding Strathmore subdivision.

Village Administrative Assistant Bill Belling, yesterday said the village expects to get the deed to the park site within the next two weeks. He said it would then be turned over to the park district.

Lack of funds and the oncoming cold season will prevent the park district from developing most of the park until next September.

PARK DIRECTOR Stan Crosland yesterday said depending on costs, the park district may be able to install the two planned baseball diamonds, a football field and field hockey area next spring.

Other facilities scheduled at the park will likely be installed over a three-year period, Crosland said. They include two tennis courts, that may be used for ice skating in the winter, four basketball half-courts, and two playgrounds.

Crosland estimated the cost of the total development of the park at $30,000. It will be designed, he said, especially to accommodate Strathmore area residents who are presently short of park facilities. The only other park in Lake County is the Willow Stream indoor pool and park.

The Twin Groves School is scheduled to be completed by the end of November and occupied by the first of the year.

STUDENTS IN the fourth through eighth grades who presently attend Kildeer School in Long Grove will be transferred to the new school. The move will probably take place during Christmas vacation.

Dist. 96 Supt. William Hitzeman said the school district had hoped to seed the football and field hockey areas, but it is too late now to have them ready by next spring.

A large paved area at the school is to be finished this fall and Hitzeman said the school district may install some basketball backboards before the school opens.

Fagin's new pitch: 'Please, buy this poor kid's candy'

by JOE SWICKARD

The Northwest suburbs, and other affluent Chicago areas, are likely targets for illegally employed crews of youthful door-to-door salesmen, warn spokesmen for the state department of labor and attorney general.

The saleskids, often as young as 9 or 10 years old, peddle candy house-to-house with the proceeds ostensibly benefitting an organization for the betterment of youth. However, the spokesmen said, the money from the oft-times overpriced candies enriches the children's boss and not a charitable organization.

Donald Mulack, of the attorney general's charitable trust division, outlined the illegal operation: "Children from culturally and economically deprived neighborhoods are recruited through handbills promising $10 to $15 a week for working after school. They may also promise some prize or bonus to the kids who sells the most — something like a pizza for the most sales in a night or earning points toward a bicycle."

MULACK SAID there are many companies operating in this manner. "We have a whole stack of files but we're concentrating on three or four."

He said two of them, National Youth Clubs of America and Student Opportunity for Selfachievement, were example of for-profit groups using names that sound like charitable organizations.

The children are divided into sales crews of about five each who are driven by the crew boss to a wealthy neighborhood or suburb, Mulack said. The boss drops the children off and cruises the neighborhood while the children make their pitch, he said.

"The kids use a sympathy approach. They say what the boss told them, and often they don't really understand it

Flower peddling leads to 12 arrests

Two Chicago men and 10 juveniles were arrested by Illinois State Police this weekend on charges stemming from the operation of an illegal street flower-peddling ring.

The 12 arrests were made at four suburban locations, North and 1st Avenues, Ill. Rtes. 83 and 72, Ill. Rte. 58 and Busse Road, and Ill. Rtes. 59 and 19. Police said the two teenagers charged were operating the selling ring by bringing youths from Chicago's south side to the locations to sell the flowers to passing motorists.

Charged with violating the state's child labor laws were Richard A. Berry, 17, of 4815 S. Keating, and Michael E. Doody, 18, of 6006 S. Parkside, both in Chicago. Police said the two violated the child labor laws by using the youths to violate state laws prohibiting peddling on a state highway without a permit.

Names of the 10 youths charged, including three girls and seven boys, could not be released.

BERRY AND Doody were arrested by police at the intersection of Rtes. 83 and 72 where three of the juveniles were also working, police said.

One of the girls arrested was holding

$80 at the time she was charged, according to police.

Police said flower peddling is usually common on special holidays and weekends, but arrests usually number only one or two on any weekend. Crackdowns on the illegal sale of the flowers peak during the spring and summer months when the peddling is most frequent, police said.

Berry and Doody were released on $1,000 bond each. They are scheduled to appear in Mount Prospect circuit court Dec. 10. The 10 juveniles are scheduled to appear on varying dates in juvenile court.

themselves. People feel they're making a donation to help kids. When there's some little tyke asking you, you're most likely to pay $1.50 for a box of candy that would cost you about 50 cents over the counter," Mulack said.

He said the children may keep about 25 cents from each box of candy sold, while the boss may keep up to 70 cents per box.

HARRIET PACINI, superintendent of the labor department said the use of the saleskids is in violation of state child labor laws. She said children under 14 cannot sell door-to-door in connection with for-profit organizations. Youngsters may, she pointed out, legally sell newspaper or magazine subscriptions in this manner.

Children between the ages of 14 and 16 may work at non-hazardous jobs, but she said door-to-door sales do not fit that category.

Because the saleskids often work from about 4 p.m. till 8 or 9 p.m., they are again breaking the law, Mrs. Pacini said.

"If they are working after 7 p.m., that's another violation of the child labor laws," she said.

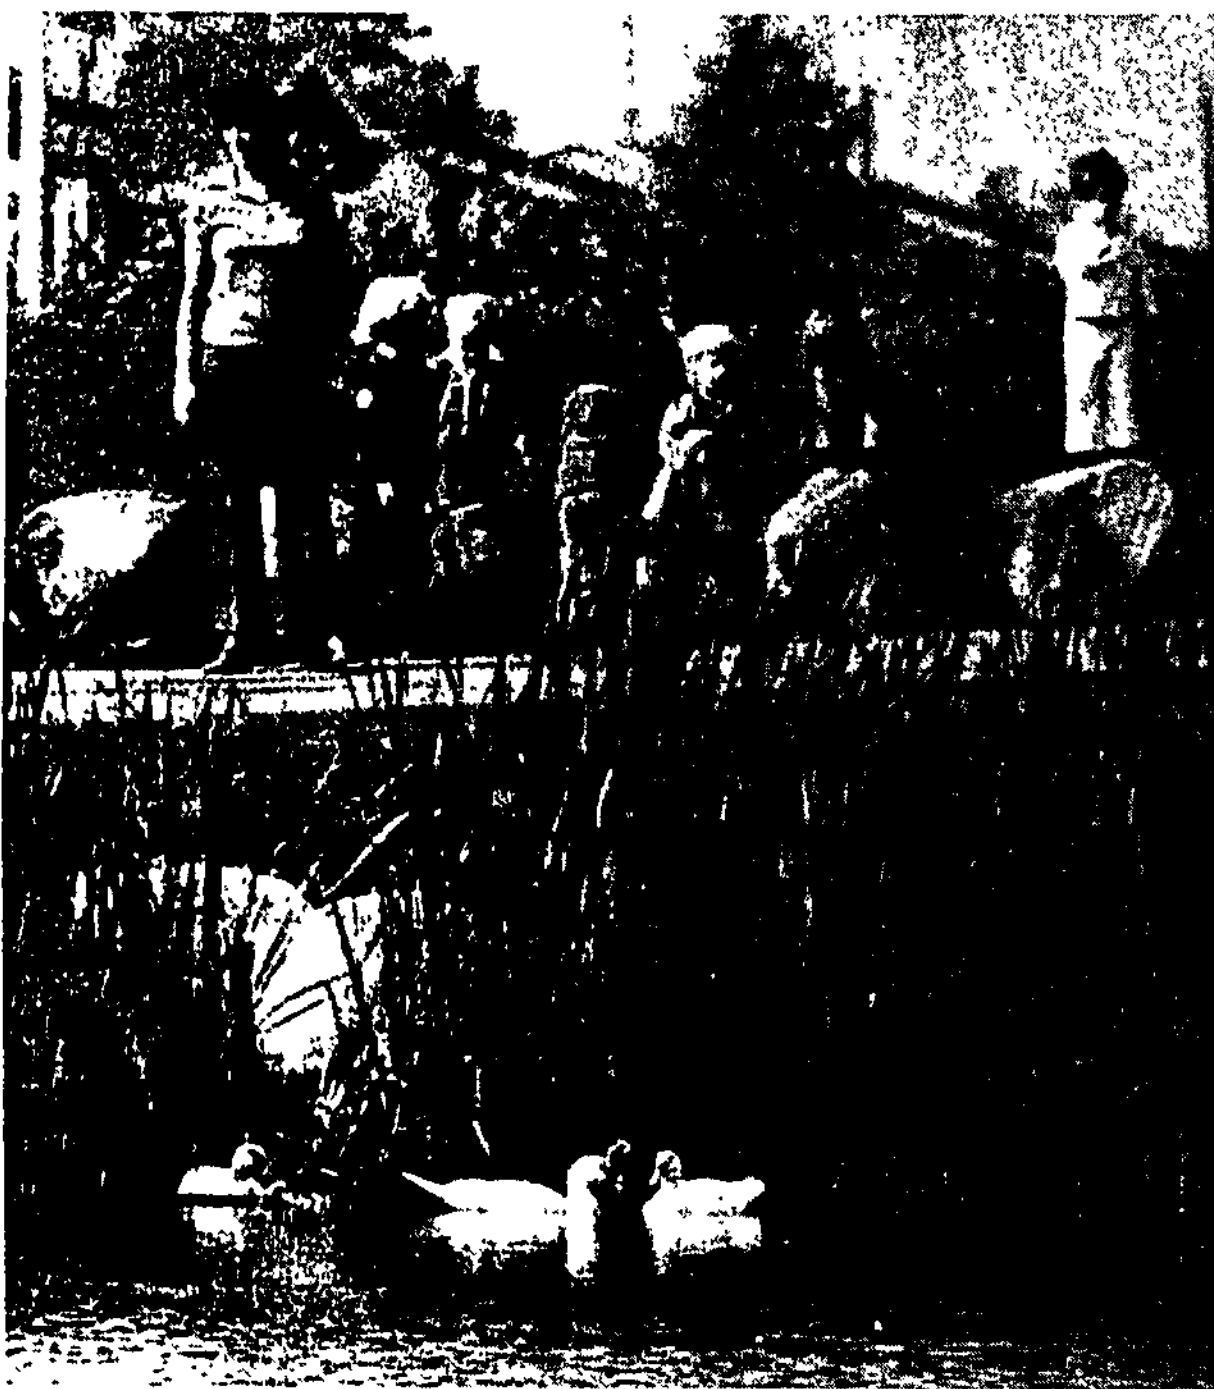

She said the saleskids often operate under the threat of fines by the crew boss. "Some we have talked to have said they had to pay 50 cents for the boss' gas if they didn't sell enough . . . some were abandoned in the Loop. They were actually afraid to meet their boss because they hadn't sold any candy. That's why we call them (the bosses) modern day Fagins."

BOTH MULACK AND Mrs. Pacini said they are after the "guy who makes the buck out of this." A Berwyn man was recently convicted after he was arrested while directing a sales crew on Chicago's South Side.

The operators of the businesses claim the law is discriminatory. They contend the sale of candy is no different than the sale of subscriptions.

Mulack and Mrs. Pacini said persons should question any child carefully who claims to be selling candy or similar goods for a charitable organization. If there are any doubts, persons should contact the state attorney general's office, the state department of labor or their local police.

"We're trying to protect the kids. Kids 9 and 10 are being recruited. This is just ridiculous. Child labor laws were set up to prevent this kind of abuse," Mulack said.

YOUNGSTERS AMUSE themselves on the rocks overlooking the pond at the Huntington Commons development in Mount Prospect while the ducks below remain oblivious to all the activity.

No date set for strike yet

Teacher union OKs strike

Members of the Dist. 63 teachers union gave the go-ahead for a strike if no progress is made in the contract dispute with the East Maine Elementary School board.

In a strike vote meeting yesterday at Gemini Junior High School, teachers voted 173-34 to give the union leadership the authority to "do whatever is necessary" to come to a favorable agreement in negotiations.

Nearly 250 of the 330 teachers in the district are members of the East Maine Education Association.

While no date was set for a strike, EMEA Pres. Henry O'Neill said he didn't think the board "can make teachers wait more than a week now that they've given us authorization."

An EMEA board member outlined a plan of action designed to sway board members in the contract dispute, including picketing of board members' homes, Teachers also plan to contact "influential organizations and people" and seek public support through leaflets and newsletters to the community.

"These actions may sound drastic but this is what we're doing instead of striking," the EMEA representative said.

EMEA MEMBERS will also participate in Wednesday's March for Education. Nearly 400 teachers from Dist. 62, Dist. 63 and Dist. 207 are expected to participate in the march from Maine East High School to Rand Park in Des Plaines.

O'Neill termed a board proposal offered at Friday's negotiation session as "basically the same thing they've been offering us since last February 8."

He said the board considers all non-salary items as "their moral and legal prerogatives and they're not going to delegate them to anybody — not the teachers or the parents."

The major obstacle to settlement is the EMEA's request that class size, hours of employment, teaching assignments, reduction of teachers, maintenance of standards and educational policy development be included in the scope of negotiations.

Salaries for the 1973-74 school year were agreed upon in August 1972.

EMEA VICE Pres. Ken Howenstine said teachers find themselves in much the same position as Americans did in 1776.

"We don't really want to do it (strike) but that's what we're being forced to do," he said.

In commenting on Friday's 7½-hour negotiation session, Howenstine said the board "more or less asked for it now. By their actions they more or less guaranteed a strike."

The EMEA vice president said the board threatened to withdraw its latest proposal if teachers went through with the strike vote. The board also refused to meet with teachers until Oct. 22, according to Howenstine.

Fire damage estimates reach $2 million

Damage estimates for the largest fire ever in Hoffman Estates ranged as high as $2 million, Deputy Fire Chief Ed Kalasa said yesterday.

The Service Merchandise Inc. store at the Golf-Rose Shopping Center was gutted in an early-morning fire Saturday. The building was insured for $1.3 million, Kalasa said.

There were no estimates on damage to contents, but Kalasa said the total damage might reach $2 million. The store in the shopping center located on Roselle Road between Higgins and Golf roads had been scheduled to open today.

Four Chicago men were arrested in connection with the blaze. Their car was stopped by Schaumburg police for a traffic violation near the fire scene.

Charged with arson, burglary and possession of stolen property were George Lawson, 20; Steven Handy, 21; Demarvin Rodgers, 19, and Craig Sanford, 19, all of Chicago. Handy also was charged with possession of burglary tools, having no driver's license on his person and driving without headlights on, and Lawson with unlawful use of weapons.

Bonds were set at $140,000 each for Handy and Lawson, $80,000 for Sanford and $75,000 for Rodgers. All were being held in Cook County Jail in lieu of bonds pending a preliminary hearing at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

6 firemen escaped death in Saturday blaze cave-in

by STIRLING MORITA

Six Hoffman Estates firefighters escaped injury and possibly death Saturday when the roof of the Service Merchandise Inc. store collapsed because of an intense fire.

"It was the most dangerous situation we've had lighting a fire in town," said Deputy Fire Chief Ed Kalasa. "Everyone in the center of the roof for some reason moved back, and then the center caved in."

He added that when the center of the roof fell, the flames shot up "like a volcano."

Kalasa had climbed back to the roof to warn the firefighters that something seemed to be wrong with the one-story building in the Golf-Rose Shopping Center. "Nobody knew why they moved back from the center."

"The same thing happened below," the deputy chief recalled. "There were about ten men in the center of the building, and the heat was intense so they backed up. Then the roof caved in. It was a good thing they moved because they could have been caught under it."

KALASA SAID the steel-bar joist roof was dangerous in this situation because

"they gave no warning when they're going to give in."

The roof caved in about 5 a.m. an hour after firefighters had arrived on the scene. The men on the roof were chopping holes to ventilate the flaming building, Kalasa said.

Kalasa said when he went to the back of the building to supervise the men, he saw the building starting to shake. He clambered back up the ladder to warn the firefighters, and an air horn was sounded twice to attract the busy men's attentions.

"IT FELT LIKE there was a whip in the roof," the deputy chief added. "I could feel it starting to shake."

The roof caved in, and flames gushed up. The men were quickly evacuated down the ladders.

"When I got down, I started to count heads," Kalasa said. "There was one volunteer fireman missing. We couldn't find him, and I thought he went down with the roof."

"But he was outside the building, just not in sight," Kalasa said.

School news notes

As part of the Riley School Parent Awareness Program, parents of third-grade students will be invited to attend a curriculum presentation Oct. 23.

The session, scheduled for 3:45 p.m., is intended to explain the educational program at the school. It will be the third session of the program.

Similar presentations on programs in the upper grades will be offered for parents in November.

Tomorrow, all first and second grade classes at Stevenson School will travel to Green Meadows Farm in southeastern Wisconsin.

Wisconsin.

The children will tour the farm, go on a horsedrawn hayride, pony rides, feed and pet the more than 300 farm animals and pick their own pumpkins.

The farm also features picnic areas, nature trails, a spring-fed swimming pond and beach and a campfire circle.

Eighth grade cheerleaders at Holmes Junior High School were recently named. They are Charmaine Klein, Alyssa Cole, Kim Cecchi, Alicia Weissense, Rose Abraham, Jeri Wallace and Denise Dunsmeier.

Students at Twin School have joined several other local schools in collecting Campbell's Soup labels to be redeemed for equipment for the school.

Labels from all regular size soup cans and Chunky Soup are needed and may be deposited at the school at 515 E. Merle Ln., Wheeling.

A group of 22 students at London Junior High School have been selected to participate in the Illinois Music Educators Association District VII Conference and Festival Nov. 3 in Wheaton.

The students will join other musicians chosen from junior high schools in six northeastern Illinois counties in presenting a public concert.

3-H project plans to be reviewed

Plans for a new development on 67.3 acres on McHenry Road will be presented to the Wheeling Zoning Board tonight.

The 3-H Building Corp., developers of the project, are asking that zoning on the property be changed from a residential to a planned development designation. The property in question was recently annexed into the village, and is located between Whippletree Village and Cedar Run.

The zoning board is also scheduled to review a request to rezone property at 39 S. Milwaukee Ave. for an office building.

Earlier this year, the property was rezoned for an apartment building designed for the elderly.

Developers of the property, however, abandoned the senior citizens housing project, saying it was no longer a profitable venture. They are now proposing an office building, which they said is more suitable for the area.

A third hearing will review a sign variation requested for 115 S. Milwaukee Ave. by Schlenger Real Estate.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Stereo, camera, watches stolen

Stereo equipment, a camera and two men's watches were apparently stolen Saturday or Sunday from a Buffalo Grove residence.

Police said the items, valued at $475, were taken from the Carol Potter residence, 319 Cherrywood Rd., between 2:30 p.m. Saturday and 9:30 a.m. Sunday. Entry was gained, police said, by breaking a second floor patio door window.

Teachers union gives authority for strike call

Members of the Dist. 63 teachers union gave the go-ahead for a strike if no progress is made in the contract dispute with the East Maine Elementary School board.

In a strike vote meeting yesterday at Gemini Junior High School, teachers voted 173-34 to give the union leadership the authority to "do whatever is necessary" to come to a favorable agreement in negotiations.

Nearly 250 of the 330 teachers in the district are members of the East Maine Education Association.

An EMEA board member outlined a plan of action designed to sway board members in the contract dispute, including picketing of board members' homes, Teachers also plan to contact "influential organizations and people" and seek public support through leaflets and newsletters to the community.

"These actions may sound drastic but this is what we're doing instead of striking," the EMEA representative said.

EMEA MEMBERS will also participate in Wednesday's March for Education. Nearly 400 teachers from Dist. 62, Dist. 63 and Dist. 207 are expected to participate in the march from Maine East High School to Rand Park in Des Plaines.

O'Neill termed a board proposal offered at Friday's negotiation session as "basically the same thing they've been offering us since last February 8."

He said the board considers all non-salary items as "their moral and legal prerogatives and they're not going to delegate them to anybody — not the teachers or the parents."

The EMEA vice president said the board threatened to withdraw its latest proposal if teachers went through with the strike vote. The board also refused to meet with teachers until Oct. 22, according to Howenstine.

"I hope you can see what their strategy is — they're sitting back and waiting to see what we'll do," he said.

O'NEILL SAID the teachers need to sway only three more board members to bring a settlement to the contract dispute. He refused to name board members supporting the teachers.

The contract dispute has been aggravated by a series of newsletters to parents from the EMEA and Dist. 63 board. EMEA members criticized the board's hiring of a professional negotiator as "cutting off our last real contact with the board."

Burglars strike in four spots

Burglars stole more than $2,500 in mostly cash and jewelry from Des Plaines residents in four separate break-ins over the weekend, police said.

Phillip Burke, 1425 Ashland Ave., told police burglars broke into his home and stole about $2,100 in cash and jewelry, including a shotgun and revolver.

The burglars, who ransacked several rooms of the house, entered while Burke was at work Friday, according to reports.

Building commissioner surprised at uproar

Protest mounts over prefab house

by STEVE BROWN

A large-scale protest was mounted yesterday in Des Plaines over the construction of a prefabricated home on the city's southeast side.

It was expected that the growing concern over the new home, at 2801 Greco St., would carry over to last night's city council meeting.

More than 50 residents contacted city officials to complain or ask questions about the house, which arrived factory assembled in two sections over the weekend. Residents claim the house does not meet city building codes.

DES PLAINES Building Comr. Alfred Prickett said that according to the architect's drawings the house meets all city codes. He said the city delayed issuing a building permit for the structure for three months while plans were being revised.

"If the plans do not match with the house, then we will put a stop order on it," Prickett explained. He said a complete inspection will be made once the installation work is completed. Prickett could not estimate how long the installation would take.

While a building permit was eventually issued for the structure, some persons claimed city officials were pressured into giving the OK for the house.

Prickett denied that he was pressured into issuing the permit. However, several sources told The Herald the owner of the house, Mrs. Stephanie Skurnick of Chicago, persuaded the city to issue the permit after it was first denied.

ALD. CARMEN SARLO (6th) whose ward includes the Greco Avenue property, said he questioned the construction of the house.

Sarlo said he inspected the exterior of the structure over the weekend and noticed considerable sagging. He added a large number of residents have complained about the house.

"I have never had so much static on any one matter," Sarlo said. He added several other aldermen had contacted him about the house.

Prickett said he has already received assurances that all the plasterboard in the house, which was damaged during shipping, will be replaced.

He contended that the building is acceptable and expressed surprise over the number of complaints the city had received.

"There is nothing wrong with this house, the federal government is advocating more construction like this," he said.

WHILE PRICKETT said there were many other homes in the city like this, others argued that it was the first.

Sarlo said there are a number of homes which have prefabricated sections in the city, but he knew of no others which were factory assembled and installed on a site.

According to the city building permit, the home is valued at $19,000.

"All we are getting is a lot of double talk from people in the city offices," said Mrs. Robert Kraves, a neighbor. She contended the building department is aware of building code violations, but has not put a stop order on the project.

"I don't feel this house meets the building codes," she added.

Officials of the Cook County Housing Authority hope to meet with federal officials within the next two weeks to work out a compromise of the proposed Des Plaines senior citizens housing product. Victor Walchirk, executive director of the CCHA, said meetings have been held with representatives of the apparent low bidders on the project in hopes of erasing the $500,000 difference between funds budgeted and what the contractors have bid.

"Right now we are trying to find ways of making deductions from the cost of the project," Walchirk said, adding he hoped to meet with officials from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in the next 10 days to two weeks to review the project.

PROGRESS ON the 129-unit apartment building has been stymied since early last month, when bids for the project were opened.

The project, which is being financed by HUD, had a budget of $1.8 million, but the low bidder, Corbetta Construction Co. of Des Plaines, was more than $500,000 over the estimate.

HUD officials in Chicago have told The Herald that sizable cuts may have to be made in the project in order to build the facility for the budgeted cost.

Patrick Joyce, a HUD operations officer, said there is little chance that any additional money can be obtained for the project at this time because of a freeze on all federal housing grants.

WHILE CCHA officials have requested that funds from another of their federally funded projects be transferred to the Des Plaines project, HUD officials said that such a transfer could not be made.

Walchirk said he hopes to have a number of possible cost-cutting measures for the project ready for the next meeting with HUD.

Federal officials in both Chicago and Washington will have to approve any changes in the project before any further action can be taken.

WALCHIRK SAID that HUD officials recommended efforts be made to cut costs before any further reviews of the project are undertaken.

CCHA officials had planned to begin construction this fall, but the increased cost has forced an indefinite delay in the project. It has been estimated the project will take from 14 to 16 months to complete.

Once completed, the facility will be limited to persons 65 years or older who have lived in Des Plaines at least two years. It is expected that rent for the one-bedroom units will average about $50 per month.

Jury rules child's death accidental

A Cook County Coroner's jury ruled yesterday accidental death took the life of a Des Plaines boy, 7, who died from injuries after being struck by a car late last month.

The young victim, Jeffery Buchanan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Buchanan, 9241 Fairway, died Oct. 11 after a two-day stay in intensive care at Lutheran General Hospital, with head injuries and a broken leg.

Cook County Sheriff's Police said the boy was struck by an auto near Golf and Dee Roads driven by a Skokie woman, Miriam Gilman, 9123 Tripp.

Sheriff's police said the boy was knocked completely off the road by the impact.

The motorist was ticketed for failing to yield the right-of-way to a pedestrian, an.

Driver suffers fatal heart attack

A Des Plaines man died Friday when he apparently suffered a heart attack while driving his car.

Dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital was Carl Schmidt, 65 of 2943 Maple St.

According to police reports, Schmidt was driving westbound on Oakton when he suffered the attack. The car then veered into opposite lanes and slammed into a wall of a building at 1401 Oakton.

Eyewitnesses to the accident then summoned a Des Plaines Fire Department ambulance.

Family members told doctors Schmidt had a history of heart trouble.

Schmidt worked as a truck driver for Milburn Brothers Inc., of Mount Prospect.

A wife, two sons, daughter-in-law and two grandchildren survive Schmidt.

'Preventing heart disease' parley set "Preventing Heart Disease" will be the subject of a community health program Friday night at St. Mark Lutheran Church in Mount Prospect.

Blase to run again for committee

Maine Township Democratic Committeeman Nicholas B. Blase will run for a third term in the March 19 primary. Blase's announcement came Friday at a press conference in Niles.

"In the next four years the Democratic Party in Cook County will change so much . . . Suburban Democrats will finally be sought after with the consideration of 'what's suburbia thinking' in making decisions," said Blase calling it a positive change in Democratic politics.

Speculation has had it that Blase, who has a private law practice as well as being mayor of Niles, would seek a state elective office this year.

Blase said bluntly he is not interested in any state office and prefers the situation he is in now. "The only thing I ever wanted was a congressional seat. The time is just not right now."

BLASE LOST A place on the ticket as Democratic candidate in the 10th Congressional District when he was defeated in the primaries by Abner Mikva. Blase said he would endorse Mikva if he chose to challenge U.S. Rep. Sam Young, R-10th, for the seat.

Blase said the suburbs have a growing political power in Cook County. "If we had 10 suburban committeemen willing to stand up and be heard we will have a strong minority voice," he said, adding the strong voices are growing in numbers.

In four years, he predicted, Democrats will run 50-50 with Republicans in the Northwest suburbs. "When Republicans move to the suburbs they become independents," he said. "The key in Maine Township is the unincorporated areas where it runs about two to one for the Democrats."

Blase said he doesn't think there will be a fight in the 1974 primaries for his post or any other. "We might see a tremendous dropoff in voter turnout instead. With Agnew and Watergate for the Republicans and all the indictments for the Democrats, the voter doesn't know who to vote for anymore."

The local scene

Cemetery story to be told

The stones in the cemeteries of Maine Township have a story to tell. Richard Welch, director of the Des Plaines Historical Society, will present that story Wednesday, Oct. 21, at the historical museum, 777 Lee St.

"Cemeteries: Historical Paradise" will be Welch's topic at the 8 p.m. meeting. The program, which will include slides, will feature the cemeteries of Maine Township.

During his research Welch discovered the graves of soldiers who fought in the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the Florida War, the Civil War and the Indian Wars in local cemeteries.

"Local history is told in the epitaphs carved on the stones . . . The stones themselves are sometimes miniature examples of the type of architecture that was popular at the time the stone was made . . . Although most gravestone poetry was obtained from books published for that purpose, many were written by family members and are gems of forgotten rhyme," he said.

The public is invited to attend.

'Sports Scope' kicks off Dec. 18

Park district plans trips to major sporting events

The Elk Grove Village Park District, in an effort to promote family entertainment opportunities, will now sponsor package trips to major sporting events.

The new program will be called "Sports Scope," according to Ric Arnold, recreation intern at the park district, who is in charge. Arnold said he is planning the program and would "welcome any suggestions for possible trips."

The first scheduled trip will be Dec. 18, when the Chicago Cougars of the World Hockey Association meet the Winnipeg Jets and their player-coach Bobby Hull at the International Amphitheatre. Tickets are $9.50 per person, according to Arnold, and will include rinkside seats, bus transportation to the game and a copy of the WHA Hockey Annual.

ONE REASON for the new program is the popularity of the trip sponsored by the park district this summer to a Chicago Bears preseason football game. "There were 50 tickets available and we could have easily sold 100," said Arnold. "Most of those who went on the trip were families," he added.

Other possibilities for trips include Chicago Bulls basketball games, more hockey games, the Ico Capades or perhaps a trip to Champaign, Ill. to watch the Illinois state high school basketball finals. Arnold said he's also checking into the possibility of getting tickets for major college basketball doubleheaders at Chicago Stadium.

"We're really not committed to anything except the hockey game yet," said

Arnold. "We're waiting until we can get some suggestions from the public as to what they want to do."

Suggestions should be submitted at least three to four weeks before the trip would take place, to allow enough time for park district staff to get tickets and make transportation arrangements.

A mailing list for "Sports Scope" members is in the works. Anyone now participating in a park district athletic program will be on the list, according to Arnold. Anyone else who wants to be on the list, which will keep members informed on upcoming trips, can do so by calling the park district office.

Reservations are now being accepted for the hockey game trip Dec. 18. Tickets can be purchased at the park district office, or by calling 437-8780.

Standards

Elk Grove sets them for home-building, and enforcing them falls to four men

by FRED GACA

• A family's apartment lease has ended and they must move into their newly-constructed home in Elk Grove Village, but the home is not ready.

• A resident complains that a contractor hired for a remodeling job has cheated him.

• A multi-million dollar factory, already behind schedule on construction, has serious faults and work must be stepped until the faults can be corrected.

These and many more related problems wind up in one village department — the building department. And the man "at the front line" on these problems is usually the building inspector.

The village has four inspectors who are responsible for safety and compliance with building codes for all construction.

BUILDING inspector is a walking, touching, looking, at times a muddy, dirty job. "But it is easier than banging nails," said Joe Gamache, one of the village's inspectors.

Like most of the men in the department, Gamache was a construction worker for several years before starting as an inspector.

Having a construction background is a big advantage for an inspector. He knows the problems a contractor faces and also some of the tricks a contractor tries to get away with.

Another advantage with construction experience is the respect an inspector gains from the builder. A contractor is more inclined to agree and less inclined to argue when he knows the inspector was "in the business."

Before any construction or remodeling work is allowed in the village, the contractor or owner must obtain a permit from the building department. The department must be notified as work progresses so inspections can be scheduled.

THE FIRST inspection is for the footings of the building. Later inspections included those for the frame, plumbing, electrical work and walls. Before a certificate of occupancy is issued, a "final inspection" must also be done.

In doing his work, an inspector is often forced to make difficult decisions. He is responsible for making sure all construction complies with the codes. Yet his authority must be used with care, because he can cause personal and financial hardships.

For example, a family may have bought a new home, expecting it to be finished by a certain date. They do not renew their lease, but the home is not completely finished in time. They are now trapped between being forced to move out of their apartment and trying to move into an unfinished home.

The inspector faces a tough decision. On one side is a family desperate for a roof over their heads. On the other side is a home that must be safe to live in. In

Resident to face battery charges

Dale Hadaway, 288 Kingsbridge Rd., has been charged with battery in a warrant sworn out with the Cook County Sheriff's Police.

The warrant was sworn out by Richard Ludovissy, Elk Grove Park District superintendent of recreation.

The two men were involved in a fight early Friday morning near the intersection of Higgins and Oakton roads. Two other men were also involved in the dispute which reportedly started when one motorist cut off the car Ludovissy was riding in.

Details of the incident are not clear and different versions of what happened were given by the men involved.

According to Hadaway, he struck Ludovissy in self defense. Ludovissy said he never saw Hadaway and contends he was hit by "a blind shot."

Ludovissy had a broken nose, black eye, chipped tooth and minor cuts near the eye after being struck by Hadaway.

Court date on the incident is Nov. 28 in the Niles branch of the circuit court.

Vandal escapes off-duty cop

A vandal caused minor damage to Grant Wood School Sunday afternoon.

According to Elk Grove Village police, Patrolman Kenneth Krzywicki was on his way home when he noticed a window open at the school and heard a bell ringing.

Krzywicki went to the open window and saw a broken flower pot and dirt scattered in the room. He then saw a person running down the hall.

The vandal was described as a small male wearing a T-shirt, blue jeans and sneakers.

Krzywicki called for assistance, but the vandal had escaped.

No other damage was reported. According to the school janitor, the bell Krzywicki heard was the regular lunch bell which rings every day.

Library 'friends' seek help with fund-raisers

The Friends of the Library seek more people willing to work on fund-raising programs for the Schaumburg Township Public Library.

Library Board member Sonja Leraas said the group, whose purpose is to aid the library in any way it can, does not lack contributors but does seek additional working members.

She encouraged anyone interested in joining the group to contact the library for further information.

The Friends are sponsoring a film series at the library and need house managers for nights the films are showing.

Anyone interested in helping is asked to contact Patricia Hogan, at 885-3373.

The Friends supports the film series a theater group, and other activities that vary from book sale to cultural happenings.

The Friends have a bank balance of $965.69. Through dues and the profits from the Friends' play "Happy Birthday, Wanda June," they have added substantially to the treasury.

The next Friends play is "House of Bernardo Alba" by Garcia Lorca. It will be presented Nov. 8, 9, 10, 16 and 17. Friends receive reduced ticket rates. Board member Joe McAuliffe may be called at 529-1732 for further information.

The Friends are also planning to sponsor a children's theatrical series under Mrs. Leraas' direction.

Lighting firm holds groundbreaking for headquarters

Halo Lighting, a McGraw-Edison Co. division, broke ground last week for its $3 million main headquarters in Elk Grove Village.

Village officials joined Halo Pres. Robert S. Fremont, other dignitaries and more than 100 Halo employees for the ceremony at the 50-acre site on the southwest corner of Busse Road and Oakton Street.

The building, which will become the main headquarters and factory for Halo, one of the largest lighting companies in the world, will consist of 400,000 square feet of plant space on one level and 35,000 square feet of offices on two floors.

A one-acre sculptured lake located between the office portion of the building and Busse Road will allow for the retention of up to 2½ acre-feet of runoff water.

THE BUILDING will be of steel frame construction with a decorative concrete facade surrounding the office area. Solar glass will be used in the office windows.

About 50,000 square feet of the plant will be devoted to the assembly area; the remainder will house warehousing of component parts and finished goods.

The plant will be devoted to assembly of the Halo line of commercial and residential incandescent lighting fixtures and the Lite-Trend line of decorative residential lighting fixtures.

The office section will include a 3,000-square-foot lighting showroom and demonstration lab for use by architects, engineers and builders.

In addition to Chicago-area plants, the company has factories in California; Toronto, Ont., Canada, and London.

Construction has already begun; occupancy is planned for June, 1974. The new headquarters is almost double the size of Halo's present Rosemont facility.

THE PLANNED $5 million headquarters of Halo Lighting, a division of McGraw-Edison Co., is under construction at the southwest corner of Busse Road and Oakton Street. The building, located on a 20-acre site, will include a factory and two-story office building. Occupancy is set for June, 1974.

Annual goal: 900 units
Already donated: 752 units

A total of 169 units (pints) were taken in last Saturday's village blood drive which started the fourth quarter collection period. Another five units were donated at Alexian Brothers Medical Center last week prior to Saturday's drive.

A total of 148 units is still needed to meet the annual quota for the village.

Residents may donate blood at the hospital on Saturday and again on Oct. 25. Call the hospital at 437-5500 to make an appointment.

Elk Grove Village requires 900 units of blood donated yearly to guarantee free blood replacement for all residents. The village could be dropped from the replacement program if it fails to meet the quota.

Fagin's new pitch: 'Please, buy this poor kid's candy'

by JOE SWICKARD

The Northwest suburbs, and other affluent Chicago areas, are likely targets for illegally employed crews of youthful door-to-door salesmen, warn spokesmen for the state department of labor and attorney general.

The saleskids, often as young as 9 or 10 years old, peddle candy house-to-house with the proceeds ostensibly benefitting an organization for the betterment of youth. However, the spokesmen said, the money from the oft-times overpriced candies enriches the children's boss and not a charitable organization.

Donald Mulack, of the attorney general's charitable trust division, outlined the illegal operation: "Children from culturally and economically deprived neighborhoods are recruited through handbills promising $10 to $15 a week for working after school. They may also promise some prize or bonus to the kids who sells the most — something like a pizza for the most sales in a night or earning points toward a bicycle."

MULACK SAID there are many companies operating in this manner. "We have a whole stack of files but we're concentrating on three or four."

He said two of them, National Youth Clubs of America and Student Opportunity for Selfachievement, were examples of for-profit groups using names that sound like charitable organizations.

The children are divided into sales crews of about five each who are driven by the crew boss to a wealthy neighborhood or suburb, Mulack said. The boss drops the children off and cruises the neighborhood while the children make their pitch, he said.

"The kids use a sympathy approach. They say what the boss told them, and often they don't really understand it

Flower peddling leads to 12 arrests

Two Chicago men and 10 juveniles were arrested by Illinois State Police this weekend on charges stemming from the operation of an illegal street flower-peddling ring.

The 12 arrests were made at four suburban locations, North and 1st Avenues, Ill. Rtes. 83 and 72, Ill. Rte. 58 and Busse Road, and Ill. Rtes. 59 and 19. Police said the two teenagers charged were operating the selling ring by bringing youths from Chicago's south side to the locations to sell the flowers to passing motorists.

Charged with violating the state's child labor laws were Richard A. Berry, 17, of 4815 S. Keating, and Michael E. Doody, 18, of 6006 S. Parkside, both in Chicago. Police said the two violated the child labor laws by using the youths to violate state laws prohibiting peddling on a state highway without a permit.

Names of the 10 youths charged, including three girls and seven boys, could not be released.

BERRY AND Doody were arrested by police at the intersection of Rtes. 83 and 72 where three of the juveniles were also working, police said.

One of the girls arrested was holding

$80 at the time she was charged, according to police.

Police said flower peddling is usually common on special holidays and weekends, but arrests usually number only one or two on any weekend. Crackdowns on the illegal sale of the flowers peak during the spring and summer months when the peddling is most frequent, police said.

Berry and Doody were released on $1,000 bond each. They are scheduled to appear in Mount Prospect circuit court Dec. 10. The 10 juveniles are scheduled to appear on varying dates in juvenile court.

connection with for-profit organizations. Youngsters may, she pointed out, legally sell newspaper or magazine subscriptions in this manner.

Children between the ages of 14 and 16 may work at non-hazardous jobs, but she said door-to-door sales do not fit that category.

Because the saleskids often work from about 4 p.m. till 8 or 9 p.m., they are again breaking the law, Mrs. Pacini said.

"If they are working after 7 p.m., that's another violation of the child labor laws," she said.

She said the saleskids often operate under the threat of fines by the crew boss. "Some we have talked to have said they had to 'pay 50 cents for the boss' gas if they didn't sell enough . . . some were abandoned in the Loop. They were actually afraid to meet their boss because they hadn't sold any candy. That's why we call them (the bosses) modern day Fagins."

BOTH MULACK AND Mrs. Pacini said they are after the "guy who makes the buck out of this." A Berwyn man was recently convicted after he was arrested while directing a sales crew on Chicago's South Side.

The operators of the businesses claim the law is discriminatory. They contend the sale of candy is no different than the sale of subscriptions.

Mulack and Mrs. Pacini said persons should question any child carefully who claims to be selling candy or similar goods for a charitable organization. If there are any doubts, persons should contact the state attorney general's office, the state department of labor or their local police.

"We're trying to protect the kids. Kids 9 and 10 are being recruited. This is just ridiculous. Child labor laws were set up to prevent this kind of abuse," Mulack said.

Referendum won't hike school taxes: administrators

Lower school taxes for the next few years, in spite of the necessity for a $15 million building referendum, are forecast by Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 administrators.

Marvin Lapicola, assistant superintendent for finance, said voter approval of the proposed February referendum "will not raise taxes." It is planned to provide funds to renovate eight older schools and take care of the district's building needs until 1980.

He pointed to a steady increase in assessed valuation that he thinks will more than double by 1979.

"This continued increase valuation helps pay past debts and makes new bills lighter," he added.

LAPICOLA SAID the present $2.77 tax rate for each $100 of assessed valuation should drop by at least a nickel in next spring's tax bills.

The rate will continue to drop pennies lower each year even if the referendum is approved and will drop even more if the referendum is not approved by voters, said Lapicola.

"However a 'no' vote on the referendum means we have no place for the 8,630 more students we expect by 1980," he added. The district estimates it will need 220 more classrooms by 1980.

Lapicola said the five-year building plan has several unknowns, such as the exact number of students coming into areas, when and where land development will take place and future site locations.

"Right now all we know for a fact is that we have about 30 developments under construction," he added.

"We also anticipate an increase from the present 15,511 students to 24,150," he said.

S. GUY FISHMAN, architect for several district schools based construction costs on past experience, the present inflationary period and took into account the rise that should result in the coming years, said Lapicola.

About $3 million of the referendum is earmarked for renovation of older schools. Improvements are proposed for Black-Lakeview and Twinbrook, all in Hoffman Estates. Schools in Schaumburg include Campanelli, and Schaumburg elementary school.

SITES AVAILABLE for construction are:

- An 8-acre site in the Multicon development on Hassell Road in Hoffman Estates.

- Village In The Park, a 12.8-acre site north of Golf Road and west of Roselle Road in Schaumburg.

- Two 8-acre sites, in the Moon Lake development between Golf and Higgins Roads, east of Barrington Road in Hoffman Estates.

- Eight acres, in the Hoffman Rosner development south of Golf Road in Schaumburg.

- The Levitt and Sons site, 10 acres in Schaumburg in the Sheffield Towne development north of Bode Road and east of Barrington Road. Also a 22-acre junior high school site.

- Two 7-acre sites, one north of Wise and one north of Schaumburg Road in Campanelli developments. Also a 5-acre site at the northeast corner of Wise and Roselle roads.

- A 10-acre site between Bode and Schaumburg roads in Schaumburg.

- An 8-acre site east of the Twinbrook School between Golf and Higgins roads near Roselle Road.

- A 4-acre site near Irving Park Road in Hanover Park, and a 9-acre site on Nerge Road in Roselle.

- Centex builders in Elk Grove Village have offered a site as it is required.

Lapicola said before the referendum package is presented to the board for action the building and sites committee must meet to finalize the plan.

"Data collected over the past months shows a need for the referendum," he said.

the middle is the building inspector.

"It's tough, you have to make a judgment," said Inspector John Tracy.

GUIDING the inspectors is what Building Commissioner Tom Rettenbacher calls "the good book," referring to the BOCA (Building Officials and Code Administration) standards.

"All you've got to know is this," said Tracy as he put the BOCA code on plumbing on his desk.

"And this," he said as he pulled out the BOCA code on electrical work.

"And this . . . and this . . . and this . . ." he said, pulling out still more BOCA books and village zoning ordinances.

By the time he was finished stacking the books, Tracy had a pile about a foot high.

In the case of the family trying to move in, the inspector's first concern is the safety of the home. If construction is far enough along that the house has no health or safety hazards, the inspector will try to issue a temporary certificate of occupancy.

THIS CERTIFICATE will permit the family to move in, but the builder must finish all necessary work within a specified deadline. A final inspection will then be made before issuing a normal certificate of occupancy.

If the health or safety hazards are not eliminated, no certificate will be issued, despite the pleas of the family. The inspector is the one who would be questioned if something happened to the family as a result of a fault in the building.

One thing an inspector cannot do and will not do is bend or break a rule in the building code.

"You can't give an inch," said Gamache. "It's like everything else, you give an inch and they take a foot."

Contractors, like everyone else, get together and talk shop. If word gets around that an inspector allowed a variation in an ordinance for one contractor, all the contractors will be demanding the same variation.

Generally, the inspectors do not have much problem with contractors who have worked in the village before. The first-time contractor is often a problem. They have worked in other villages where building codes are not as strictly defined and enforced as Elk Grove Village. They tend to argue with the inspectors.

"WE HAVE A saying to settle the arguments," said Tracy. "You are in Elk Grove Village and you will do it our way."

A typical day for a building inspector starts about 8 a.m. with paperwork. They fill out reports on the inspections done the day before. When the reports are finished, they pick up their schedule of inspections for the day and drive out to the job sites.

One day last week, Gamache had two final inspections in the morning. The first was in the new area west of Rt. 53 and the inspection went smoothly.

Gamache pointed out several minor faults in the home and workmen began to correct them immediately. He told the job foreman he would be back in the afternoon, if the faults were taken care of, an occupancy permit would be issued.

The second inspection angered Gamache. The home was being constructed as a custom design and the builder asked for the final, stating in a letter that only a few minor things had to be done.

From a block away, Gamache could see the "minor things" were not minor and would require two to three weeks more work before the home was anywhere near ready for a final.

AFTER TOURING the building, Gamache walked out shaking his head. "There's no sense even writing a punch list. I'll fill two pages. I'll just write 'final inspection not approved,'" he said.

The contractor would get an irate call from Gamache. He doesn't like being called in for an inspection when the building is not ready to be checked.

The inspection failure would be recorded, but later the inspectors talked about things that cannot be put in the records — the belief that the builder was trying to sneak something past the department and he should be watched closely.

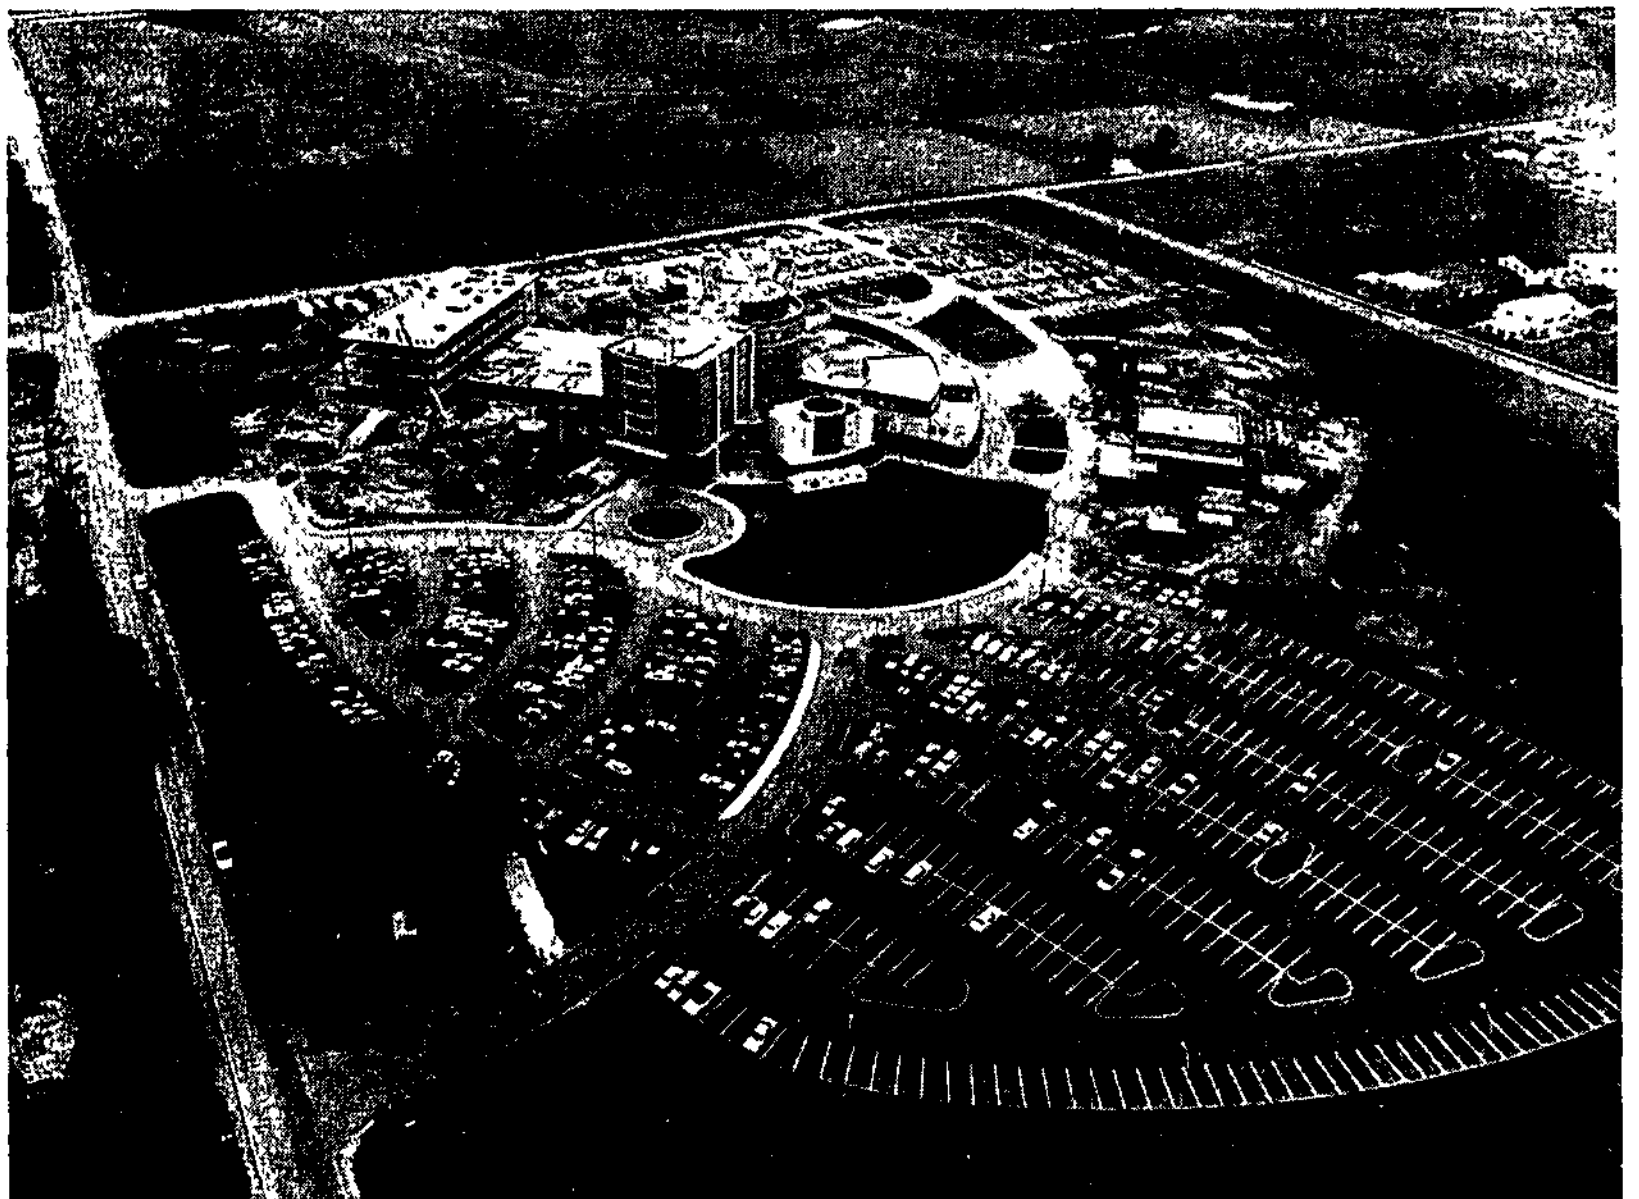

In the afternoon, the men would continue with their inspections until they quit for the day. They would return to their office in the village hall with the results of the inspections.

The next day, those results would be marked in the records and the men would be back out in the field once again.

May share facilities, programming

Rolling Meadows, Salt Creek park districts to join hands?

The Rolling Meadows Park District and the Salt Creek Park District are considering a plan to share facilities and programming.

Details of the plan have not been released but both park district boards have been presented with the plan and are reviewing it. A joint meeting of both boards could be held soon to consider the proposal, according to Steve Person, director of the Rolling Meadows Park District.

The proposal comes on the heels of a near two year court battle between the districts for taxing control of a 6.5-acre industrial park now taxed by the Rolling Meadows district and valued at $6.9 million.

A SUIT FILED by the Salt Creek district in 1972 to have the industrial park, which was illegally annexed by the Rolling Meadows district in 1959, returned was lost in effect last month. Cook County Circuit Court Judge Edward F. Healy ruled the district had waited too long to contest the annexation.

Salt Creek park commissioners are considering appealing Healy's decision, but no decision has been made yet.

The proposal being considered between the two districts may be an attempt to end any further legal dispute between the districts, but Person says the plan is merely intended to promote cooperation between the districts.

"We feel park districts in the area should work together," he said. "We have facilities that they don't have and they have some we don't have, like the hotel facilities (at the Arlington Park Towers)."

Emphasis of the joint endeavor seems to be on use of the Rolling Meadows indoor ice rink by the Salt Creek district and of the indoor swimming pool at the Arlington Park Towers hotel by the Rolling Meadows district.

SALT CREEK currently has no indoor ice skating facility and Rolling Meadows has no indoor pool facility. The Salt Creek district is permitted swim time at the hotel pool for its swimming instruction program and free swim program.

Person devised the plan after consulting with Salt Creek Park Dist. Director James DeVos. The two have said they view the plan as one that could benefit both districts and would be precedent-setting in the state.

County denies rezoning pleas in township

Cook County commissioners turned down two rezoning requests for property in Palatine Township yesterday.

One application, for a Montessori day nursery school in a home at Quentin Road and Kenilworth Street, was turned down by the board. The Village of Palatine had objected to the zoning change requested by Catherine M. Key, 218 State St., Palatine.

A Harwood Heights developer also failed to get a zoning change for a half-acre at the northeast corner of Plum Grove Road and Wilmette Avenue. Sam Dimitri, the developer, told Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals members in August that he had no definite plans for the corner, other than to construct some stores. Homeowners surrounding the site protested the zoning change request.

A controversial rezoning request for land bordering the Plum Grove Woodlands subdivision was deferred to the county board's Oct. 29 meeting. The zoning board has recommended that the property be conditionally rezoned to allow a small shopping center on the northeast corner of Aigoulin Road and Thorntree Lane. The county board is expected to rule on the shopping center, to be developed by James G. O'Donnell, at their late October meeting.

Neighboring homeowners had protested that the shopping center would create increased traffic and flooding to the Plum Grove Woodlands subdivision.

A fourth rezoning request, by George Donald Buscher, was approved. Buscher owns a hardware store on Northwest Highway west of Lake Zurich Road in northern Palatine Township. He asked for rezoning for adjoining property to expand his present building.

PERSON ADDED the plan may help end talk among area park districts of dissolving the Salt Creek district and dividing up its territory — including the multi-million-dollar assessed race track property — among the Rolling Meadows, Palatine and Arlington Heights park districts.

"I hope it's just a thing that we can look at as two park districts working together," DeVos said. "The plan looks very good. I think it's really going to benefit both of us because I think it would be such a good thing for both districts."

There has been a lot of talk about dividing up the Salt Creek Park District, Person said. "But I think this is a progressive step and the thing that makes this move natural is part of the Salt Creek district is in Rolling Meadows."

The Salt Creek district serves about 2,000 residents living in an area bounded by Euclid Avenue on the south, Wilke Road on the east, Palatine Road on the north, and Hicks Road on the west. The territory encompasses parts of the Villages of Palatine, Arlington Heights and the City of Rolling Meadows.

BELLS CLANGED, children were awed, and even Smokey the Bear showed up for the Fire Prevention Week display Saturday. Everyone got his turn at the shiny brass bell, including young Mike Paet with a helping hand from mom. Palatine firemen conducted the equipment display at the Palatine Mall.

High school students ask representation

Plan to put pupils on board weighed

The High School Dist. 211 Board has agreed to consider placing students on the board as non-voting members.

Three students from Fremd High School appeared before the board Thursday night with a proposal asking that one student from each of the five high schools be allowed to sit on the board.

Board Pres. Robert Creek said the board would consider the proposal but reminded the students they already can communicate with the board by asking to be placed on the board meeting agenda. "Our rules are very clear and very open," for being placed on the agenda, he said, inviting students to "show your interest by showing up more often" at board meetings.

BOARD MEMBER Robert Seger added it is "not necessary" to be placed on the agenda to speak to the board. Members of the audience can ask to address the board during its meeting, he said, and Creek agreed but said requests to speak would be granted "within limits."

"I think you'll find, my friends," said Creek to the students, "that if its curriculum, optional study hall, or electives, it goes up the chain of command" through the administration to the board. If someone is not familiar with an issue throughout this process he "can't talk intelligently about it," he said. There are "vast areas in which we deal that are tedious, complex, and take some financial acumen," said Creek.

Several years ago the board had a student affairs committee composed of students, teachers, administrators and board members but it only operated for a few months. Board member Edward

Perry said students are "a source of resource that hasn't been overlooked in the past but sort of petered out after a few months." He said students are a source of information "we can't afford to overlook."

JIM VANIDES, vice president of the Fremd student council, said after the meeting, "We're no worse off than we were before. They understand that we're sincerely interested and that's what's important."

The written proposal said "student apathy is in large part due to the general lack of communication and control over their own education process." The regular channels of communication through the administration to the board are "often tedious and frustrating," said the proposal, but if students have "the opportunity to voice opinions at board meetings . . . it will give the student the opportunity to become an integral part of his own education."

In other action, students at Conant High School asked the board to approve a student gun club. Creek told the school administration to bring a charter of the club to the next board meeting with a promise that no firearms will appear in the school building. "I can understand people have strong feelings about this," he said. "I don't want any hardware, brass or black powder in the school building."

The board also held an hour-long discipline hearing in closed session Tuesday and expelled a student at Conant High School for "gross disobedience and misconduct."

Fagin's new pitch: 'Please, buy this poor kid's candy'

by JOE SWICKARD

The Northwest suburbs, and other affluent Chicago areas, are likely targets for illegally employed crews of youthful door-to-door salesmen, warn spokesmen for the state department of labor and attorney general.

The saleskids, often as young as 9 or 10 years old, peddle candy house-to-house with the proceeds ostensibly benefiting an organization for the betterment of youth. However, the spokesmen said, the money from the oft-times overpriced candies enriches the children's boss and not a charitable organization.

Donald Mulack, of the attorney general's charitable trust division, outlined the illegal operation: "Children from culturally and economically deprived neighborhoods are recruited through handbills promising $10 to $15 a week for working after school. They may also promise some prize or bonus to the kids who sells the most — something like a pizza for the most sales in a night or earning points toward a bicycle."

MULACK SAID there are many companies operating in this manner. "We have a whole stack of files but we're concentrating on three or four."

He said two of them, National Youth Clubs of America and Student Opportunity for Self-achievement, were example of for-profit groups using names that sound like charitable organizations.

The children are divided into sales crews of about five each who are driven by the crew boss to a wealthy neighborhood or suburb, Mulack said. The boss drops the children off and cruises the neighborhood while the children make their pitch, he said.

"The kids use a sympathy approach. They say what the boss told them, and often they don't really understand it

Flower peddling leads to 12 arrests

Two Chicago men and 10 juveniles were arrested by Illinois State Police this weekend on charges stemming from the operation of an illegal street flower-peddling ring.

The 12 arrests were made at four suburban locations, North and 1st Avenues, Ill. Rtes. 83 and 72, Ill. Rte. 58 and Busse Road, and Ill. Rtes. 59 and 19. Police said the two teenagers charged were operating the selling ring by bringing youths from Chicago's south side to the locations to sell the flowers to passing motorists.

Charged with violating the state's child labor laws were Richard A. Berry, 17, of 4815 S. Keating, and Michael E. Doody, 18, of 6006 S. Parkside, both in Chicago. Police said the two violated the child labor laws by using the youths to violate state laws prohibiting peddling on a state highway without a permit.

Names of the 10 youths charged, including three girls and seven boys, could not be released.

BERRY AND Doody were arrested by police at the intersection of Rtes. 83 and 72 where three of the juveniles were also working, police said.

One of the girls arrested was holding

$80 at the time she was charged, according to police.

Police said flower peddling is usually common on special holidays and weekends, but arrests usually number only one or two on any weekend. Crackdowns on the illegal sale of the flowers peak during the spring and summer months when the peddling is most frequent, police said.

Berry and Doody were released on $1,000 bond each. They are scheduled to appear in Mount Prospect circuit court Dec. 10. The 10 juveniles are scheduled to appear on varying dates in juvenile court.

HARRIET PACINI, superintendent of the labor department said the use of the saleskids is in violation of state child labor laws. She said children under 14 cannot sell door-to-door in connection with for-profit organizations. Youngsters may, she pointed out, legally sell newspaper or magazine subscriptions in this manner.

6 firemen escape death in roof cave-in

by STIRLING MORITA

Six Hoffman Estates firefighters escaped injury and possibly death Saturday when the roof of the Service Merchandise Inc. store collapsed because of an intense fire.

"It was the most dangerous situation we've had fighting a fire in town," said Deputy Fire Chief Ed Kalasa. "Everyone in the center of the roof for some reason moved back, and then the center caved in."

He added that when the center of the roof fell, the flames shot up "like a volcano."

Kalasa had climbed back to the roof to warn the firefighters that something seemed to be wrong with the one-story building in the Golf-Rose Shopping Center. "Nobody knew why they moved back from the center."

"The same thing happened below," the deputy chief recalled. "There were about ten men in the center of the building, and the heat was intense so they backed up. Then the roof caved in. It was a good thing they moved because they could have been caught under it."

KALASA SAID the steel-bar joist roof was dangerous in this situation because "they gave no warning when they're going to give in."

He added that the steel was expanded by the heat and when the water struck and cooled the supports, they drew back, causing the roof to collapse.

The roof caved in about 5 a.m. an hour after firefighters had arrived on the scene. The men on the roof were chop-

Damage guess reaches $2 million

Damage estimates for the largest fire ever in Hoffman Estates ranged as high as $2 million, Deputy Fire Chief Ed Kalasa said yesterday.

The Service Merchandise Inc. store at the Golf-Rose Shopping Center was gutted in an early-morning fire Saturday. The building was insured for $1.3 million, Kalasa said.

There were no estimates on damage to contents, but Kalasa said the total damage might reach $2 million. The store in the shopping center located on Roselle Road between Higgins and Golf roads had been scheduled to open today.

Four Chicago men were arrested in connection with the blaze. Their car was stopped by Schaumburg police for a traffic violation near the fire scene.

Charged with arson, burglary and possession of stolen property were George Lawson, 20; Steven Handy, 21; Demarvin Rodgers, 19, and Craig Sanford, 19, all of Chicago. Handy also was charged with possession of burglary tools, having no driver's license on his person and driving without headlights on, and Lawson with unlawful use of weapons.

Bonds were set at $140,000 each for Handy and Lawson, $90,000 for Sanford and $75,000 for Rodgers. All were being held in Cook County Jail in lieu of bonds pending a preliminary hearing at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

ping holes to ventilate the flaming building, Kalasa said.

Kalasa said when he went to the back of the building to supervise the men, he saw the building starting to shake. He clambered back up the ladder to warn the firefighters, and an air horn was sounded twice to attract the busy men's attention.

"IT FELT LIKE there was a whip in the roof," the deputy chief added. "I could feel it starting to shake."

The roof caved in, and flames gushed up. The men were quickly evacuated down the ladders.

"When I got down, I started to count heads," Kalasa said. "There was one volunteer fireman missing. We couldn't find him, and I thought he went down with the roof."

"But he was outside the building, just not in sight," Kalasa said.

Senior citizen program to open soon

Palatine Township's new senior citizen activity program will be open for its first events as soon as planners for the program can get volunteers and participants.

Newly hired coordinator Joyce Lennox is looking for senior citizens, particularly those who have not been active in other area recreational programs. They can contact her at 991-1112 to get details on various activities.

Two part-time paid workers are being sought to conduct a six-month canvass of the township in an effort to contact some 3,000 elderly residents. The canvassers should be middle-aged or older. Also, volunteers to help with a crafts program, transportation and visits to the home-bound may contact the coordinator.

When the program starts, senior citizens will be able to get information on Social Security and other agencies that affect the elderly. A group activities program, with transportation provided, is a major part of the plan.

Crafts, movies, bingo, dancing and card games are some of the activities planned for the elderly. Many of the programs are in conjunction with Palatine's St. Joseph Home for the Elderly and Plum Grove Nursing Home.

The senior citizens program was financed earlier this year by up to $14,000 from Palatine Township revenue sharing funds for the first year of operation. The office for the program is located in donated space at St. Joseph's Home.

Failing to reduce speed, local youth fined $150

An 18-year-old Rolling Meadows youth was fined $150 last week in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court for failure to reduce speed in an Aug. 14 Mount Prospect accident.

Kenneth B. Schweda, 4001 Bluebird Ln., was the driver of a car that hit a tree at 907 S. Emerson St. that day. Charges of damage to village property and driving while under the influence of Sept. 7. The second youth, Daniel J. Wenzel, 17, of 1303 W. White Oak, Arlington Heights, had charges against him dropped, police said, although they could be reinstated at any time.

In other court action Friday, Ronald A. Burdick, 40, of 565 5th Ave., Des Plaines was found guilty of writing a bad check and was placed on supervision until Nov. 16, police said. The $25 check was used to buy merchandise at Goldblatt's, Mount Prospect Plaza.

Window damage estimated at $700

Windows at two Palatine commercial buildings were broken during the weekend, causing more than $700 damage to the structures.

Rock-throwing vandals were blamed for the damage at a building owned by Klestad Engineering, 550 S. Vermont St., and at the Convenient Food Mart Inc., 18 S. Greeley St. Eleven windows were broken at the Klestad Engineering building, causing an estimated $430 damage. Mud was also smeared along one side of the building.

Two large plate glass windows on the front of the Convenient Food Mart were broken. They had an approximate total value of $300.

Pevsner book on list for award recognition

"Call Me Heller, That's My Name," a book for youths written by Palatine author Stella Pevsner, is on a preliminary list of titles being considered for the Newbery-Caldecott Awards, the highest award juvenile books may receive in the United States.

Mrs. Pevsner's third book highlights the adventures of a 1920's tomboy. Her other books include "Break a Leg" and "Footsteps on the Stairs."

Revamp of parking lot weighed

Treks around the Palatine depot parking lot in search of an empty parking stall may not be as frustrating in the future.

A plan to revamp the Palatine depot parking lot to provide more short term parking for shoppers is being studied by a committee of the Palatine Village Board.

The proposal calls for doubling the number of two-hour meters to 88 and replacing the six-hour meters with eight-hour meters.

The revamping has a two-fold purpose. First, to provide more short term parking spaces for merchants located adjacent to the depot. Second, to provide parking for the occasional commuter to Chicago.

At the present time there are 225 12-hour meters at the depot lots at the intersection of Smith and Colfax streets. These spaces are filled prior to 8 a.m. The occasional commuter to Chicago, who usually doesn't leave so early, has to settle for a six-hour meter and take his chances of getting a ticket if he doesn't make it back in time.

The proposed eight-hour meters would give the occasional commuter an extra two hours but still wouldn't be sufficient for the regular commuter.

Street repair work in Rolling Meadows is expected to be completed by the end of the month, the city's public works department said yesterday.

Parts of almost every street in the city are being repaired, with the emphasis on curb and street gutter work. Broken curbs are being replaced and several streets have been repaved.

The work is being paid for from the $150,000 street maintenance fund which is financed with motor fuel tax funds from the state. The street fund also pays for such projects as snow removal and salting of streets in winter.

Portions of streets to be worked on are selected each year based on the sections most in need of repair. The street program is included in the city budget each year so that streets in the city are all repaired periodically.

Earlier this year the city also spent $46,000 to repair street cracks with slurry seal, a sealing substance. The sealer is used to prevent further cracking and seepage of water into the pavement.

Streets repaved with the substance included sections of Hoover Street, Davis Court, St. James Street, Stork Court, Jay Lane, Bluebird Lane, Wren Lane, Eastman Street, Wing Street, Sigwalt Street, Bobwhite Lane, Bobwhite Court, Pheasant Drive, Hawk Lane, Oriole Lane, Eagle Lane and Wren Court.

6 firemen escape death in roof cave-in

by STIRLING MORITA

Six Hoffman Estates firefighters escaped injury and possibly death Saturday when the roof of the Service Merchandise Inc. store collapsed because of an intense fire.

"It was the most dangerous situation we've had fighting a fire in town," said Deputy Fire Chief Ed Kalasa. "Everyone in the center of the roof for some reason moved back, and then the center caved in."

He added that when the center of the roof fell, the flames shot up "like a volcano."

Kalasa had climbed back to the roof to warn the firefighters that something seemed to be wrong with the one-story building in the Gulf-Rose Shopping Center. "Nobody knew why they moved back from the center."

"The same thing happened below," the deputy chief recalled. "There were about ten men in the center of the building, and the heat was intense so they backed up. Then the roof caved in. It was a good thing they moved because they could have been caught under it."

KALASA SAID the steel-bar joist roof was dangerous in this situation because "they gave no warning when they're going to give in."

He added that the steel was expanded by the heat and when the water struck and cooled the supports, they drew back, causing the roof to collapse.

The roof caved in about 5 a.m. an hour after firefighters had arrived on the scene. The men on the roof were chop-

Damage guess reaches $2 million

Damage estimates for the largest fire ever in Hoffman Estates ranged as high as $2 million, Deputy Fire Chief Ed Kalasa said yesterday.

The Service Merchandise Inc. store at the Gulf-Rose Shopping Center was gutted in an early-morning fire Saturday. The building was insured for $1.3 million, Kalasa said.

There were no estimates on damage to contents, but Kalasa said the total damage might reach $2 million. The store in the shopping center located on Roselle Road between Higgins and Golf roads had been scheduled to open today.

Four Chicago men were arrested in connection with the blaze. Their car was stopped by Schaumburg police for a traffic violation near the fire scene.

Charged with arson, burglary and possession of stolen property were George Lawson, 20; Steven Handy, 21; Demarvin Rodgers, 19, and Craig Sanford, 19, all of Chicago. Handy also was charged with possession of burglary tools, having no driver's license on his person and driving without headlights on, and Lawson with unlawful use of weapons.

Bonds were set at $140,000 each for Handy and Lawson, $90,000 for Sanford and $75,000 for Rodgers. All were being held in Cook County Jail in lieu of bonds pending a preliminary hearing at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

ping holes to ventilate the flaming building, Kalasa said.

Kalasa said when he went to the back of the building to supervise the men, he saw the building starting to shake. He clambered back up the ladder to warn the firefighters, and an air horn was sounded twice to attract the busy men's attentions.

could feel it starting to shake."

The roof caved in, and flames gushed up. The men were quickly evacuated down the ladders.

"When I got down, I started to count heads," Kalasa said. "There was one volunteer fireman missing. We couldn't find him, and I thought he went down with the roof."

"But he was outside the building, just not in sight," Kalasa said.

Student seats on school board weighed

The High School Dist. 211 Board has agreed to consider placing students on the board as non-voting members.

Three students from Fremd High School appeared before the board Thursday night with a proposal asking that one student from each of the five high schools be allowed to sit on the board.

Board Pres. Robert Creek said the board would consider the proposal but reminded the students they already can communicate with the board by asking to be placed on the board meeting agenda.

"Our rules are very clear and very open," for being placed on the agenda, he said, inviting students to "show your interest by showing up more often" at board meetings.

BOARD MEMBER Robert Seger added it is "not necessary" to be placed on the agenda to speak to the board. Members of the audience can ask to address the board during its meeting, he said, and Creek agreed but said requests to speak would be granted "within limits."

"I think you'll find, my friends," said Creek to the students, "that if its curriculum, optional study hall, or electives, it goes up the chain of command" through the administration to the board. If someone is not familiar with an issue throughout this process he "can't talk intelligently about it," he said. There are "vast areas in which we deal that are tedious, complex, and take some financial acumen," said Creek.

Several years ago the board had a student affairs committee composed of students, teachers, administrators and board members but it only operated for a few months. Board member Edward Perry said students are "a source of resource that hasn't been overlooked in the past but sort of petered out after a few months." He said students are a source of information "we can't afford to overlook."

JIM VANIDES, vice president of the Fremd student council, said after the meeting, "We're no worse off than we were before. They understand that we're sincerely interested and that's what's important."

The written proposal said "student apathy is in large part due to the general lack of communication and control over their own education process." The regular channels of communication through the administration to the board are "often tedious and frustrating," said the proposal, but if students have "the opportunity to voice opinions at board meetings . . . it will give the student the opportunity to become an integral part of his own education."

In other action, students at Conant High School asked the board to approve a student gun club. Creek told the school administration to bring a charter of the club to the next board meeting with a promise that no firearms will appear in the school building. "I can understand people have strong feelings about this," he said. "I don't want any hardware, brass or black powder in the school building."

The board also held an hour-long discipline hearing in closed session Tuesday and expelled a student at Conant High School for "gross disobedience and misconduct."

County denies rezoning pleas in township

Cook County commissioners turned down two rezoning requests for property in Palatine Township yesterday.

One application, for a Montessori day nursery school in a home at Quentin Road and Kenilworth Street, was turned down by the board. The Village of Palatine had objected to the zoning change requested by Catherine M. Key, 218 Slade St., Palatine.

A Harwood Heights developer also failed to get a zoning change for a half-acre at the northeast corner of Plum Grove Road and Wilmette Avenue. Sam Dimitri, the developer, told Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals members in August that he had no definite plans for the corner, other than to construct some stores. Homeowners surrounding the site protested the zoning change request.

A controversial rezoning request for land bordering the Plum Grove Woodlands subdivision was deferred to the county board's Oct. 29 meeting. The zoning board has recommended that the property be conditionally rezoned to allow a small shopping center on the northeast corner of Algonquin Road and Thornetree Lane. The county board is expected to rule on the shopping center, to be developed by James G. O'Donnell, at their late October meeting.

Neighboring homeowners had protested that the shopping center would create increased traffic and flooding to the Plum Grove Woodlands subdivision.

A fourth rezoning request, by George Donald Busscher, was approved. Busscher owns a hardware store on Northwest Highway west of Lake Zurich Road in northern Palatine Township. He asked for rezoning for adjoining property to expand his present building.

BEING A "DUMB" frosh" has some compensations. Congratulating her is fellow freshmen Adrian Taylor (right). The dress-up day for freshmen was part of freshmen initiation held last week.

Arrest third suspect from burglary ring

A third suspect in an alleged local burglary ring has been arrested and charged with two burglaries and one attempted burglary.

Brett L. Johnson, 18, of 1633 Banbury Ln., Inverness, was arrested by Palatine police Friday night. He was charged with participating in a break-in at the Orbit Roller Rink, 1350 E. Northwest Hwy., Palatine in August, and an attempted burglary and house burglary in Inverness.

Two other men were arrested last week for several local burglaries. Sam Bell, 20, was charged for participating in the burglaries with Johnson, and two other burglaries.

Howard C. Christensen, 19, of 220 E. Hicks Pl., Palatine, was charged with two thefts. All three men are scheduled for an Oct. 26 court hearing in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Johnson was released on $10,000 bond. Christensen and Bell are being held in Cook County Jail after failing to post bond.

Committee picks site for new police facility

The Schaumburg Police Department moved one step closer last night to a new spacious police station.

The Schaumburg police and fire committee voted to recommend that a 24,000-square-foot police facility be located just east of the high school on Schaumburg Road. The village board will vote on the recommendation tonight.

Trustee Herb Aigner was the only dissenting committee member. He advocated a site next to the new city civic center on Schaumburg Road east of Roselle Road.

Aigner said a police station east of Roselle Road was needed because of commercial growth to the northeast of the village. He also pointed out that high school traffic often blocks up Schaumburg Road during rush hours.

POLICE CHIEF Martin Conroy said the west site was more acceptable because it would provide higher ground for police radio antennas. He added that traffic will be heavy in the future at Roselle and Schaumburg roads. Conroy said the west site had north-south access via Bralstree and Salem drives.

Mayor Robert Atcher said the type of persons that would be brought into a police station are not the type that he would like to see associated with the village's cultural center.

"If you fellows were around here during the day . . . you would not want that kind of people wandering around the civic center," Atcher said. He added that if the east site were selected, the court traffic would compound parking problems at the civic center.

The committee was told that a post office would also probably be built on the west site. The land was donated by Campanelli Bros. Builders. Only about half of the 26-acre tract is buildable.

Fathers, right, were converted into cheerleaders during the game. The SAA team won a flip giving them the game trophy after four scoreless quarters. In the Toilet Bowl games, played earlier, SAA's Knights beat the Boy's Club Titans, 21-6 during Widget class play and the Boy's Club Lancers beat the SAA Vikings, 7-0 in the Junior category.

Developers Frank Munao criticized proposed architectural guidelines for Schaumburg Centre and explained his feelings to the plans commission last night.

"I think 1890 northern rural Illinois architecture is too restrictive, and would prefer the latitude to go to colonial, Williamsburg or other styles," Munao said.

"What we want in the Schaumburg Centre area is early midwestern architecture with some flexibility," Dick Nemellin, plans commission chairman, told Munao.

Munao is the owner of a recently-completed office building in the planned historic district which spirals out from the Roselle-Schaumburg roads intersection.

FIRST DRAFT of an ordinance designed to govern development of the area reached the plans commission last night. It calls for zero lot line zoning to be granted by a nine-member Schaumburg Centre commission with concurrence of the village board. Zero lot line zoning can remove setback requirements.

Specific guidelines are to be prepared which would serve as basic zoning limits for the district. The commission, to be established by the village board, would consist of a member of the plan commission, zoning board, property owner, representatives of engineering and building departments, and possibly a member of the Greater Schaumburg Association of Commerce and Industry.

Preliminary planning was done by a plans commission subcommittee with Jim Rosenberg serving as chairman.

Deliberations on the proposed ordinance will continue at a future date to be announced by the plans commission.

Armstrong School to hold open house

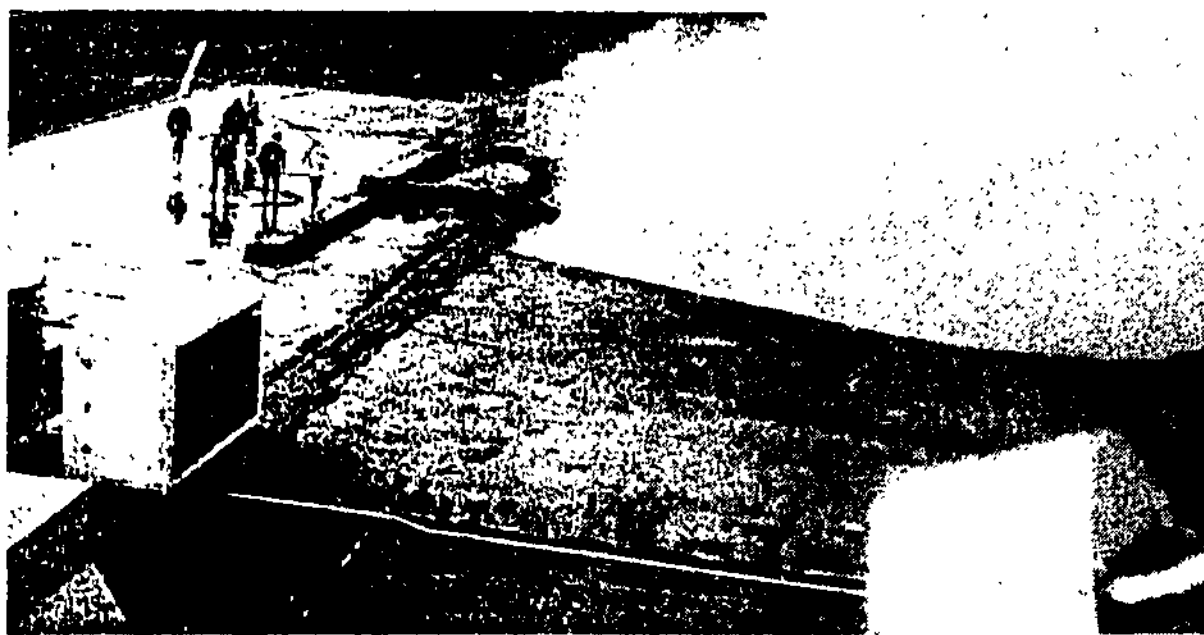

There will be an open house for all grades, including its early childhood classes, Wednesday at Armstrong School, 155 N. Kingsdale, Hoffman Estates.

Parents of children in early childhood through second grade may visit from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Visitation for grades three through five is from 8 to 9 p.m.

A bake sale and book fair will be held in the school from 6:30 to 9 p.m. There will be no business meeting at this PTA session.

LOSS OF LIFE WAS averted during Saturday's fire at the Golf Rose Shopping Center when fire fighters, al-

Developer of Outer Planets to make $58,000 cash gift

Lee N. Romano will make a $58,000 cash contribution to Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 to cover Phase I of his proposed Schaumburg Outer Planets development at Higgins Road and I-90.

Romano, an Arlington Heights land concept designer, has also agreed to future negotiations with the school district for additional contributions and a school site.

"In our recent discussion, Romano pledged a $50 per unit contribution for Phase I payable on issuance of occupancy permits," Dist. 54 Board Pres. Donnie Rudd said yesterday.

ON COMPLETION of Phase I, to contain 1,100 units in four 32-story buildings, Romano has promised to insure Dist. 54 officials that remaining phases of his complex "will not have a detrimental effect" on the school district, Rudd said.

"If the first phase generates more than 116 children, as the school district projects, he will then make a minimum of $50 contribution per unit for the remaining units," Rudd continued.

"He said he doesn't want to give us land he has now but, if needed, he would purchase other property outside of the complex to provide a school site," Rudd added.

Romano expects a decision at tonight's village board meeting on annexation of a 66-acre parcel and a 74-acre tract near Old Schaumburg Road. He also is asking planned unit development zoning for the land.

LAST MONTH, the Schaumburg Zoning Board of Appeals recommended the village board deny both annexation and zoning on the property because Romano failed, during three hearings, to produce specific plans for the development.

THE TOTAL site consists of more than 200 acres in which Romano plans to develop a futuristic city over the next 15 years.

He expects the complex to have a total population of 30,000 and believes an additional 70,000 persons will be employed there.

by JOE SWICKARD

The Northwest suburbs, and other affluent Chicago areas, are likely targets for illegally employed crews of youthful door-to-door salesmen, warn spokesmen for the state department of labor and attorney general.

The saleskids, often as young as 9 or 10 years old, peddle candy house-to-house with the proceeds ostensibly benefiting an organization for the betterment of youth. However, the spokesmen said, the money from the oft-times overpriced candies enriches the children's boss and not a charitable organization.

Donald Mulack, of the attorney general's charitable trust division, outlined the illegal operation: "Children from culturally and economically deprived neighborhoods are recruited through handbills promising $10 to $15 a week for working after school. They may also promise some prize or bonus to the kids who sell the most — something like a pizza for the most sales in a night or earning points toward a bicycle."

MULACK SAID there are many companies operating in this manner. "We have a whole stack of files but we're concentrating on three or four."

He said two of them, National Youth Clubs of America and Student Opportunity for Selfachievement, were example of for-profit groups using names that sound like charitable organizations.

The children are divided into sales crews of about five each who are driven by the crew boss to a wealthy neighborhood or suburb, Mulack said. The boss drops the children off and cruises the neighborhood while the children make their pitch, he said.

"The kids use a sympathy approach. They say what the boss told them, and often they don't really understand it

Flower peddling leads to 12 arrests

Two Chicago men and 10 juveniles were arrested by Illinois State Police this weekend on charges stemming from the operation of an illegal street flower-peddling ring.

The 12 arrests were made at four suburban locations, North and 1st Avenues, Ill. Rtes. 83 and 72, Ill. Rte. 58 and Busse Road, and Ill. Rtes. 59 and 19. Police said the two teenagers charged were operating the selling ring by bringing youths from Chicago's south side to the locations to sell the flowers to passing motorists.

Charged with violating the state's child labor laws were Richard A. Berry, 17, of 4815 S. Keating, and Michael E. Doody, 18, of 6006 S. Parkside, both in Chicago. Police said the two violated the child labor laws by using the youths to violate state laws prohibiting peddling on a state highway without a permit.

Names of the 10 youths charged, including three girls and seven boys, could not be released.

BERRY AND Doody were arrested by police at the intersection of Rtes. 83 and 72 where three of the juveniles were also working, police said.

One of the girls arrested was holding

$80 at the time she was charged, according to police.

Police said flower peddling is usually common on special holidays and weekends, but arrests usually number only one or two on any weekend. Crackdowns on the illegal sale of the flowers peak during the spring and summer months when the peddling is most frequent, police said.

Berry and Doody were released on $1,000 bond each. They are scheduled to appear in Mount Prospect circuit court Dec. 10. The 10 juveniles are scheduled to appear on varying dates in juvenile court.

connection with for-profit organizations. Youngsters may, she pointed out, legally sell newspaper or magazine subscriptions in this manner.

Children between the ages of 14 and 16 may work at non-hazardous jobs, but she said door-to-door sales do not fit that category.

Because the saleskids often work from about 4 p.m. till 8 or 9 p.m., they are again breaking the law, Mrs. Pacini said. "If they are working after 7 p.m., that's another violation of the child labor laws," she said.

She said the saleskids often operate under the threat of fines by the crew boss. "Some we have talked to have said they had to pay 50 cents for the boss' gas if they didn't sell enough . . . some were abandoned in the Loop. They were actually afraid to meet their boss because they hadn't sold any candy. That's why we call them (the bosses) modern day Fagins."

BOTH MULACK AND Mrs. Pacini said they are after the "guy who makes the buck out of this." A Berwyn man was recently convicted after he was arrested while directing a sales crew on Chicago's South Side.

The operators of the businesses claim the law is discriminatory. They contend the sale of candy is no different than the sale of subscriptions.

Mulack and Mrs. Pacini said persons should question any child carefully who claims to be selling candy or similar goods for a charitable organization. If there are any doubts, persons should contact the state attorney general's office, the state department of labor or their local police.

"We're trying to protect the kids. Kids 9 and 10 are being recruited. This is just ridiculous. Child labor laws were set up to prevent this kind of abuse," Mulack said.

The varying results of two referenda in Schaumburg Township Saturday provides interesting contrast in voter turnout and trends.

Schaumburg Park District officials showed fatigue from their weeks of effort spent in selling a $2.5 million recreational package to constituents. That exhaustion quickly turned to exhilaration when news of a 4-to-1 victory reached them.

In Hoffman Estates, five district trustees, particularly District Pres. Bill Brilliant, displayed only anger when they learned voters defeated the ambulance tax proposal. That vote couldn't be termed resounding, though, since only 417 residents came to the polls.

Failure of the issue, however, should not be interpreted as a reflection on firefighters, most of whom spent election day working to tame a major blaze at Golf-Rose Shopping Center.

Firefighters cannot be blamed, either, for their inability to provide callers with polling place information last week. Nor are they at fault that results of the vote could not be given to phone callers Saturday night or persons who visited stations Sunday.

OFFICIALS of Service Merchandise Corp., the Golf-Rose Center space razed in Saturday morning's fire, are now waiting for a fire marshal's ruling permitting them to begin bulldozing within 10 days. They expect to have a new two-story structure ready for April opening.

HILLDALE VILLAGES may not be an entirely successful venture for Multicon Properties Inc. The Bethlehem Steel Corp. subsidiary is now asking Hoffman Estates for a year extension on its annexation agreement. That time, reportedly, would be used to work up a plan for still undeveloped land, to arrange for joint development of that land with another firm, or to sell off the remaining undeveloped acres. The latter, according to a Multicon representative, is preferred.

The firm has so far constructed 330 apartment units and an 18-hole golf course but has not begun planned condominium, townhouse or single family projects in the village.

SCHAUMBURG'S Big Banjo was where country-and-western singer Patsy Montana chose for her birthday celebration Sunday night since her former partner, Jimmy James, is appearing there. Also on hand were Red Blanchard, Carl Davis (of Carl and Harvey fame) and Doc Hawkins. Mayor Robert O. Atcher was expected but didn't show, though WMAQ's Officer Vic stopped by to play a tune on his harmonica.

CHEERS FOR Al Larson, Schaumburg SUPER publicity chief, who celebrates a really big birthday Sunday. Congratulations are in order, too for Village Atty. Jack Siegel and Frau, who celebrated a 21st anniversary last week.

At Fleetwing Farm the Canadian geese are preparing to go south and leave the white ducks alone to feed on the stubs from the children. The woods were beautiful for the fall colour, and the children have already had a pony ride or two. The hayrides are planned for the next week or so, but don't fret if your child misses something it will all be repeated when the geese return. See Fleetwing, then decide. Eight groups to attend Oct. 29 meet

Homeowners groups to join to fight low-income housing

by MARCIA KRAMER

Plans reportedly are afoot to organize Mount Prospect homeowners groups against the construction of low and moderate-income housing in the village.

Edward B. Rhea Jr., president of the Mount Shire Homeowners Association, is scheduled to speak on the subject of subsidized housing at the Oct. 29 meeting of the Northwest Suburban Council of Associations, an umbrella group of eight homeowners organizations, mainly in Prospect Heights and the New Town section of Mount Prospect.

Asked about any efforts to organize opposition to low and moderate-income housing, Rhea said, "It's too early to talk about it." He added, "It's a safe assumption that homeowners would be opposed to putting in federally subsidized low-income housing."

A report issued earlier this month by the Regional Housing Coalition, an ad hoc group of suburban mayors including Mount Prospect's Robert D. Teichert, proposed that 10,300 units of low and moderate-income housing be built in the Northwest suburbs over the next 10 years.

No specific breakdown of units per suburb was suggested.

MARIE L. CAYLOR, president of the Northwest Suburban Council of Associations, said Rhea contacted her shortly after the report came out and asked her to start a petition drive opposing low and moderate-income housing in Mount Prospect.

Mrs. Caylor said however she refused because, "It would be very foolish. In the long run, we might as well face up to the fact that low and moderate-income housing is inevitable."

When Rhea then asked permission to speak at the upcoming association meeting, Mrs. Caylor said, she agreed to let him address the group. Rhea confirmed that he "will be at the meeting," but said he is "not free to talk about what's going to be discussed."

His feelings on low and moderate-income housing, he said, are that he is in favor of subsidized housing for the elderly, but sees no need for such housing otherwise. "There's no need for it in Mount Prospect," he said. "We don't have any big number of people employed in Mount Prospect who are what you would call low income."

Proponents of low and moderate-income housing say it's needed to provide some housing say it's needed to provide who work in the suburbs but can't afford to live near where they work because of the high cost of housing.

Mount Shire Club liquor license request denied

A request to issue a liquor license to the Mount Shire Club was rejected last night by the finance committee of the Mount Prospect Village Board.

The three trustees serving on the committee recommended to deny the license because they felt the private club, at 1841 W. Golf Rd., should not be permitted to sell alcoholic beverages in a residential neighborhood. The recommendation now goes to the full village board for action.

Until the club was voluntarily closed by the owner in July after two arrests were made for the alleged illegal sale of alcohol, it was operated as a bottle club.

Under that arrangement, members bring their own bottles, which are then stored at the club and served at the members' request.

Trustee Patrick J. Link led the opposition to the village's issuing a liquor license or even, as the club's attorney requested, endorsing the concept of a bottle club through an ordinance.

LINK, AN attorney, said it would be a bad precedent for the village to give its approval to a bottle club. As long as liquor is not sold on the premises, he said, there is no reason for the village to regulate the club.

Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann concurred, saying the village would be "hard pressed to license anything other than sale." The next step, he said, would be to license individual homeowners who offer alcoholic beverages in their homes, because that would be under the same concept of invitation only and no sales.

Bernard Lee, attorney for the owner of the club, DiMucci Home Builders Inc., Mount Prospect, said he felt it would be "impossible to operate a bottle club without some sort of enabling ordinance from the village." He said after the meeting he did not know when and if the club would reopen if the liquor license request is denied by the village board.

Trustees Kenneth V. Scholten, the finance committee chairman, and Errol F. Richardson agreed with Link in recommending the license request be turned down.

Ten residents of the nearby Mount Shire subdivision attended the meeting to oppose the license, but did not address the committee.

Two killed in crash

Two persons, including a Mount Prospect man, were killed Sunday when the car in which they were riding went out of control and struck a concrete retaining wall on the Tri-State Tollway in Franklin Park.

Illinois State Police said the driver of the car, Carl Eullano, 32, of 1800 Palm Dr., Mount Prospect, was killed instantly. A woman companion also was fatally injured but her identity was being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Curriculum topic of meet tonight

Plans for possibly revising and adopting new curriculum programs will be discussed tonight by the Dist. 26 Board of Education at its regular meeting at 8 p.m. at River Trails Junior High School.

Curriculum director Al Levin is scheduled to give a report on the status of educational programs in the district and discuss tentative changes in some subject areas.

Levin said teacher committees will be set up to evaluate current programs and recommend revisions, if necessary, in six major areas.

Subjects to be considered, he said, are health and safety, language arts, reading and spelling, math, science and career education.

Other business on the agenda of tonight's meeting includes:

- Discussion of planned Life-Safety Code improvements.

- Schedule for parent-teacher conferences following grade reports.

Homecoming comes to Prospect High

The coronation of the homecoming queen Friday will be the highlight of "Knights Week" at Prospect High School in Mount Prospect.

Students are building floats for the homecoming parade scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Thursday. The parade will begin at Owens Park and travel to the school. Following the parade, there will be a pep rally on the football field and a student dance.

The homecoming queen will be crowned at 2 p.m. Friday at a student assembly in the fieldhouse. She will be presented that night in special pregame ceremonies set for 7:45 p.m.

Prospect then will meet Forest View High School in a football contest at 8 p.m. Winners of the float contest will be announced at the game.

A semi-formal student dance is scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday in the school cafeteria. Tickets are $3.50.

Two blood drives set for this month

Two village blood drives have been scheduled for the month of October.

The first will be Sunday, Oct. 21, from 12:30 p.m. to 3 p.m. at Southminster Presbyterian Church, Central Road at Dryden Place.

The second donor session will be Tuesday, Oct. 30, from 3:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at Thomas Junior High School, 303 E. Thomas St.

Persons interested in contributing to the Arlington Heights guaranteed blood replacement program are asked to call 233-2340, ext. 245.

Approval expected for apartments

Final approval is expected tonight for construction of 300 apartment units on Busse Road, south of Algonquin Road.

The Mount Prospect Village Board is expected to give the go-ahead for the development, known as Forest Cove.

In other action, the board is expected to rule on several routine pre-annexation agreements.

The board meeting is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in village hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

$1.5 to $3 million bandied about

Prospect Hts. parks eye referendum

Officials of the Prospect Heights Park District are seriously considering sponsoring a referendum sometime next year. The Herald has learned the most talked-of figures are between $1.5 million and $3 million.

Park District Director Ron Greenberg confirmed the park board has informally discussed a referendum, but added that no firm decision had been made.

Board members, he added, have held "informal discussion" and some have been testing public opinion because "there's no sense going for one (a referendum) if you know it will fail." The Prospect Heights Improvement Association is one group that has been sounded out on the idea of a referendum. Yet despite discussion last week, the PHIA has made no decision whether it could support one.

GREENBERG SAID the park district is initiating an update of its comprehensive plan, particularly in the areas of capital improvements and facilities. If a deficit in facilities is found, Greenberg said it would most probably mean a referendum would have to be held.

"There is no way we could do it with our budget," Greenberg said, meaning any capital improvement project. The park board's recently approved 1973-74 budget was $83,363.

"The comprehensive plan has to be updated before we can seriously sit down

BEING A "DUMB" frog" has some compensations. Mary Jo Stubing (left), whose costume was judged tops among the oddly dressed freshmen roaming the halls of Sacred Heart of Mary High School Friday,

Sweet record for Lions Club

A record total of donations has been reached in last week's Candy Day sales conducted by the Mount Prospect Lions Club, and the counting is still continuing.

As of yesterday, $2,785 had been contributed, and the final figure is expected to top $3,000, according to Louis Velasco, secretary of the club.

The total surpassed the $2,100 raised in last year's Candy Day sales, which also was a record, and easily met the goal of $2,000.

Velasco attributed the higher figure this year to more workers — 35 volunteers vs. 25 last year — and more contributions by local businesses. Some 35 to 40 Mount Prospect businessmen have accounted for a "substantial amount" of the donations, contributing $10 to $100 each.

In all, 3,830 rolls of candy were passed out on Friday.

The contributions are used to support Lions Club activities for the blind.

Driver suffers fatal heart attack

A Des Plaines man died Friday when he apparently suffered a heart attack while driving his car.

Dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital was Carl Schmidt, 65 of 2043 Maple St.

According to police reports, Schmidt was driving westbound on Oakton when he suffered the attack. The car then veered into opposite lanes and slammed into a wall of a building at 1401 Oakton.

Eyewitnesses to the accident then summoned a Des Plaines Fire Department ambulance.

Family members told doctors Schmidt had a history of heart trouble.

Schmidt worked as a truck driver for Milburn Brothers Inc., of Mount Prospect.

A wife, two sons, daughter-in-law and two grandchildren survive Schmidt.

A 22-year-old Mount Prospect man was arrested after he allegedly tried to park his car on the village parkway in front of 602 N. Prospect Manor Ave.

Kent A. Peterson, 600 N. Eastwood Ave., was charged by police with driving while intoxicated, driving with an expired driver's license and damage to village property. He was arrested at 1:42 a.m. A passenger in his car was not charged.

Peterson will appear Nov. 7 in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Committee gets resident survey results

The Mount Prospect Dist. 57 school board last night sent down to committee the results of a community questionnaire. The committee, headed by board member Michael Ward, is to report back to the board at its Dec. 3 meeting.

Only slightly more than 1,000 persons answered the questionnaire, although as many as 12,000 could have. The questions dealt with the residents' likes and dislikes as to curriculum in the district, their opinions of the school board and facts on themselves.

Board member Martha Rotelli refused to approve sending the results to committee until a time limit was put on committee action.

"I'm very disappointed. We spent so much time, effort and money," she said of the questionnaire. "This wasn't my idea. I wasn't in favor of it."

She said she felt the questionnaire was pointless if it was just sent out to fulfill campaign promises that the people would be able to give their opinion. She repeatedly asked the board why the questionnaire was sent out and urged has talked with firms about a possible study of physical expansion plans to be included in the district's comprehensive plan update.

some board discussion and speed "in getting back" to the people.

OTHER BOARD members felt as did board member Peter Olesen who said, "We've read it. We'll take cognizance of it (in future decisions)." Board member Edith Freund said that the questionnaire was sent out only to comply with Dr. Michael Bakalis' guidelines. Bakalis is State Supt. of Education.

Board president Robert Novy said he thought the committee, of which he is a member, could come up with specific proposals, such as ways to improve communications with residents, and possibly to simplify the board's district's financial statement.

Assistant Supt. Dwight Hall said the district's administration will be incorporating some of the residents' opinions, as expressed in the questionnaire, into the program plan which will be submitted to the board in six to eight weeks. This plan is required by the state board of education.

It was pointed out by several board members that even if people said they disliked a certain program, through the questionnaire, it is obvious the program will not be dropped tomorrow.

Back-to-school art winners named

Seven Northwest suburban children have been named winners in a back-to-school safety coloring contest sponsored by the Mount Prospect State Bank.

The winning entries were among 900 drawings submitted.

Winners were: Heidi Marie Roderick of Schaumburg, age 4; Steven Herod, Des Plaines, age 5; Daniel Mundt, Mount Prospect, age 6; Leslyn Goombs, Rolling Meadows, age 7; Mickey Sullivan, Mount Prospect, age 8; Denise Holzkopf, Mount Prospect, age 9; and Amy Prorok, Morton Grove, age 10.

The entries were judged by Mount Prospect Police Chief Elbert B. Giddens.

by JOE SWICKARD

The Northwest suburbs, and other affluent Chicago areas, are likely targets for illegally employed crews of youthful door-to-door salesmen, warn spokesmen for the state department of labor and attorney general.

The saleskids, often as young as 9 or 10 years old, peddle candy house-to-house with the proceeds ostensibly benefiting an organization for the betterment of youth. However, the spokesmen said, the money from the oft-times overpriced candies enriches the children's boss and not a charitable organization.

Donald Mulack, of the attorney general's charitable trust division, outlined the illegal operation: "Children from culturally and economically deprived neighborhoods are recruited through handbills promising $10 to $15 a week for working after school. They may also promise some prize or bonus to the kids who sell the most — something like a pizza for the most sales in a night or earning points toward a bicycle."

MULACK SAID there are many companies operating in this manner. "We have a whole stack of files but we're concentrating on three or four."

He said two of them, National Youth Clubs of America and Student Opportunity for Selfachievement, were example of for-profit groups using names that sound like charitable organizations.

The children are divided into sales crews of about five each who are driven by the crew boss to a wealthy neighborhood or suburb, Mulack said. The boss drops the children off and cruises the neighborhood while the children make their pitch, he said.

Flower peddling leads to 12 arrests

Two Chicago men and 10 juveniles were arrested by Illinois State Police this weekend on charges stemming from the operation of an illegal street flower-peddling ring.

The 12 arrests were made at four suburban locations, North and 1st Avenues, Ill. Rtes. 83 and 72, Ill. Rte. 58 and Busse Road, and Ill. Rtes. 59 and 19. Police said the two teenagers charged were operating the selling ring by bringing youths from Chicago's south side to the locations to sell the flowers to passing motorists.

Charged with violating the state's child labor laws were Richard A. Berry, 17, of 4815 S. Keating, and Michael E. Doody, 18, of 6006 S. Parkside, both in Chicago. Police said the two violated the child labor laws by using the youths to violate state laws prohibiting peddling on a state highway without a permit.

Names of the 10 youths charged, including three girls and seven boys, could not be released.

BERRY AND Doody were arrested by police at the intersection of Rtes. 83 and 72 where three of the juveniles were also working, police said.

One of the girls arrested was holding

$30 at the time she was charged, according to police.

Police said flower peddling is usually common on special holidays and weekends, but arrests usually number only one or two on any weekend. Crackdowns on the illegal sale of the flowers peak during the spring and summer months when the peddling is most frequent, police said.

Berry and Doody were released on $1,000 bond each. They are scheduled to appear in Mount Prospect circuit court Dec. 10. The 10 juveniles are scheduled to appear on varying dates in juvenile court.

themselves. People feel they're making a donation to help kids. When there's some little tyke asking you, you're most likely to pay $1.50 for a box of candy that would cost you about 50 cents over the counter," Mulack said.

He said the children may keep about 25 cents from each box of candy sold, while the boss may keep up to 70 cents per box.

HARRIET PACINI, superintendent of the labor department said the use of the saleskids is in violation of state child labor laws. She said children under 14 cannot sell door-to-door in connection with for-profit organizations. Youngsters may, she pointed out, legally sell newspaper or magazine subscriptions in this manner.

Children between the ages of 14 and 16 may work at non-hazardous jobs, but she said door-to-door sales do not fit that category.

Because the saleskids often work from about 4 p.m. till 8 or 9 p.m., they are again breaking the law, Mrs. Pacini said. "If they are working after 7 p.m., that's another violation of the child labor laws," she said.

She said the saleskids often operate under the threat of fines by the crew boss. "Some we have talked to have said they had to pay 50 cents for the boss' gas if they didn't sell enough . . . some were abandoned in the Loop. They were actually afraid to meet their boss because they hadn't sold any candy. That's why we call them (the bosses) modern day Fagins."

BOTH MULACK AND Mrs. Pacini said they are after the "guy who makes the buck out of this." A Berwyn man was recently convicted after he was arrested while directing a sales crew on Chicago's South Side.

The operators of the businesses claim the law is discriminatory. They contend the sale of candy is no different than the sale of subscriptions.

Mulack and Mrs. Pacini said persons should question any child carefully who claims to be selling candy or similar goods for a charitable organization. If there are any doubts, persons should contact the state attorney general's office, the state department of labor or their local police.

"We're trying to protect the kids. Kids 9 and 10 are being recruited. This is just ridiculous. Child labor laws were set up to prevent this kind of abuse," Mulack said.

It was a proud moment when Miles E. Rodgers, 211 Withorn Ln., accepted the certified public accountants certificate for his daughter, Janice, at the recent annual C.P.A. awards banquet.

Janice, who graduated from Prospect High School in 1970 and from the University of Illinois in June, 1973, was unable to attend the banquet at the Conrad Hilton Hotel in Chicago because she is currently attending Harvard Law School.

Miles is also a C.P.A. and a member of the Illinois Society of C.P.A., which sponsored the banquet. The father-daughter membership of Miles and Janice is one of two such combinations in the society's membership.

Mrs. Rodgers (Barbara) attended the banquet with her husband and they were seated with the Arthur Anderson & Co. employees, friends and relatives. Janice has worked for the Anderson Co. as a receptionist for the past three summers and during Christmas and semester breaks.

MOUNT PROSPECT's famed artist, Christl Hansen, won again. She took first place in the oil and acrylic painting category in the recent Des Plaines Art Guild's 10th annual art fair.

IRVANA WILKS, of 1982 Algonquin, used to play touch football with her husband, Alan, and frequently, she'd fall and get hurt when playing. So, Alan suggested that she sign up for a course in judo at the local YMCA to learn how to fall without getting hurt.

Well, here it is two years later and Irvana has really taken to the judo business. As a matter of fact, now she's a bit of an expert. She was just recently promoted to Sankyū, which is brown belt third class. It's an award of which Irvana is proud. She exercises regularly, faithfully attends the judo classes and loves it.

Says Irvana, "Judo is really a very physical sport, but not a violent one. Actually, judo means, the gentle way." How's the football game going now that she's learned how to fall? "Wouldn't you know?" says Irvana. "We don't play football too often any more!"

NINE FIFTH GRADE, 10-year-old Girl Scouts from Troop 293 recently had a weekend outing at Happy Hollow, a Girl Scout Camp at Troy, Wis., near Lake Geneva. They earned the money for the trip through last year's cookie sale.

The weather was wet and cold and many outdoor activities were curtailed and indoor craft work was substituted. There were 150 girls at the camp that weekend and the Mount Prospect Girl Scouts made many friends with girls from other areas.

Mount Prospect girls on the trip were Andrea Martensen, Mary Tonolo, Penny Jones, Marie Frankol, Kathy Bopp, Karen Bailey, Marilyn Gray, Nancy Lila and Deann Lung. Accompanying the girls was their leader, Gloria (Mrs. Tom) Jones and Catherine (Mrs. Severino) Tonolo.

Six separate accidents cause rash of injuries

Four persons were admitted to area hospitals and another seven were treated for injuries after six separate accidents last weekend in Mount Prospect.

Most seriously injured was Ginger Gatz, 19, of Morton Grove, who received back and neck injuries Sunday in an accident at 700 River Rd. She was in fair condition yesterday, at Holy Family Hospital. Also treated at the hospital was Valrie Hutchinson, 23, of Prairie View. Further details of the accident were unavailable yesterday.

Sue Marsh, 17, of 301 S. Albert St., Mount Prospect, was admitted to Northwest Community Hospital after an accident Friday night on the Ill. Rte. 83 S-curve at Lincoln Street. She was a passenger in a car driven by John E. Kutten, 17, of 520 S. Wille St., Mount Prospect.

Kutten's vehicle was eastbound on the Lincoln Street portion of the S-curve when it left the road, struck a tree and bounced back onto the roadway. The car was then hit by another, driven by Gregory A. Robertson, 17, of 5 W. Berkshire Ln., Mount Prospect.

Kutten and another passenger, Scott Segin, 17, of 106 S. George St., Mount Prospect, were treated for injuries at the hospital, but not admitted. Mount Prospect police charged Kutten with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident and with leaving the roadway. He is to appear Nov. 14 in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

ANOTHER Mount Prospect girl, Mary Ann Abbott, 17, of 409 Carol Ln., was admitted to Northwest Community Hospital with a possible concussion Friday night after the car she was riding in was involved in an accident at the intersection of Algonquin Road and Dempster Street.

Miss Abbott was a passenger in a car operated by Nancy K. Landmeier, 21, of 4716 Arbor Dr., Rolling Meadows. Miss Landmeier, who was treated for injuries but not admitted, was charged by police with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

She struck a car making a left turn in front of hers, police said. The driver of the turning car, Carlo J. Opsahl, 17, of 1540 Blackhawk Dr., Mount Prospect, was charged with failure to yield right-of-way. Both will appear Nov. 21 in court.

Teachers approve strike

Members of the Dist. 63 teachers union gave the go-ahead for a strike if no progress is made in the contract dispute with the East Maine Elementary School board.

In a strike vote meeting yesterday at Gemini Junior High School, teachers voted 173-31 to give the union leadership the authority to "do whatever is necessary" to come to a favorable agreement in negotiations.

Nearly 250 of the 330 teachers in the district are members of the East Maine Education Association.

While no date was set for a strike, EMEA Pres. Henry O'Neill said he didn't think the board "can make teachers wait more than a week now that they've given us authorization."

An EMEA board member outlined a plan of action designed to sway board members in the contract dispute, including picketing of board members' homes. Teachers also plan to contact "influential organizations and people" and seek public support through leaflets and newsletters to the community.

"These actions may sound drastic but this is what we're doing instead of striking," the EMEA representative said.

EMEA MEMBERS will also participate in Wednesday's March for Education. Nearly 400 teachers from Dist. 62, Dist. 63 and Dist. 207 are expected to participate in the march from Maine East High School to Rand Park in Des Plaines.

O'Neill termed a board proposal offered at Friday's negotiation session as "basically the same thing they've been offering us since last February 6."

He said the board considers all non-union items as "their moral and legal prerogatives and they're not going to delegate them to anybody — not the teachers or the parents."

The major obstacle to settlement is the EMEA's request that class size, hours of employment, teaching assignments, reduction of teachers, maintenance of standards and educational policy development be included in the scope of negotiations.

Salaries for the 1973-74 school year were agreed upon in August 1972.

EMEA VICE Pres. Ken Howenstine said teachers find themselves in much the same position as Americans did in 1776.

"We don't really want to do it (strike) but that's what we're being forced to do," he said.

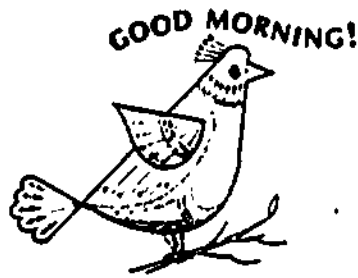

In commenting on Friday's 7½-hour negotiation session, Howenstine said the board "more or less asked for it now. By their actions they more or less guaranteed a strike."

The EMEA vice president said the board threatened to withdraw its latest proposal if teachers went through with the strike vote. The board also refused to meet with teachers until Oct. 22, according to Howenstine.

"I hope you can see what their strategy is — they're sitting back and waiting to see what we'll do," he said.

O'NEILL SAID the teachers need to sway only three more board members to bring a settlement to the contract dispute. He refused to name board members supporting the teachers.

Laseke Disposal gets pact for trash collection here

The Laseke Disposal Co. has been awarded a five-year contract to collect garbage in the Village of Arlington Heights.

The monthly residential rate, effective Jan. 1, will be $5.08.

The village board last night voted 7-2 to award the contract to Laseke after nearly two hours of deliberation. A proposal by a competing scavenger, SCA Services, had been recommended by the finance committee but a motion to adopt that recommendation last night failed 3-6.

Speaking for the Laseke company, Les Floetz said Laseke "won't make any money but won't go broke either" at the $5.08 rate. He said the company had been forced to lower its price from a previous high of more than $6 because of what he termed "an unrealistic bid" by SCA Services.

The company plans to put off buying some new equipment scheduled in 1974 and take money out of profits in order to stay in business, he said.

Comparisons with other communities that have backdoor, twice weekly pickup show that the $6.03-$6.13 proposals were legitimate bids. "There's nothing phony about that rate," Floetz said.

QUESTIONED HOW Laseke plans to stay in business at a monthly rate more than a dollar below its previous bid, he said:

"He (Henry Laseke, company president) can do it simply by not making any money. He's been forced into it by an unrealistic bid that he's got to meet or go out of business."

A spokesman for SCA Services, new to the Chicago area but nationally one of the largest disposal companies, said that his bid price was intended to make a profit and not merely to gain a foothold in the market by driving out the Laseke company.

"We're here for one reason . . . that the proposed contract (Laseke's $6.13) appeared to have excessive profits," said SCA's regional director, Robert Settlemyre.

Twelve members of the audience spoke at last night's meeting, and all but two of them urged the board to award the contract to Laseke. They cited good service, Laseke's knowledge of the community and the fact the company is a "known quantity" as reasons why the firm should be retained.

A resident of Surrey Ridge West, Martin Cawley, said a survey in that subdivision turned up about 100 complaints on the garbage service, about 50 of which he said were bona fide.

"IT IS ASININE in a community of this size and affluence that we have to argue over garbage service," he said.

Trustees Ted Sallinsky and Ralph Clabour, who voted against awarding Laseke the new contract, said they were not confident the company could stay in business at the $5.08 price.

Both men said they made the judgment based upon figures supplied by the company last winter when it requested a 50-cent a month residential price hike.

Commuter park grant request answered soon?

Arlington Heights' 3½-year-old application for a $400,000 grant for additional commuter parking is expected to go to the U.S. Department of Transportation soon.

The village has been seeking the money to pay two-thirds of the cost of buying and razing Hill-Behan's lumberyard at the southeast corner of Arlington Heights Road and Northwest Highway.

Assistant Village Mgr. Darryl Kenning said he was informed last week that the application, which has been thrown in with grant requests from 18 other municipalities, has been processed by the transportation department's regional offices and is ready to be forwarded to Washington, D.C.

The village negotiated for four years on the sale of the lumber yard property, which could provide 168 additional commuter spaces.

An estimated total of $600,000 is needed — $400,000 from federal sources and $200,000 from state and local funds.

The state has already approved $58,000 for the project, contingent upon the federal funding.

Approval by the regional offices followed a series of public hearings throughout the metropolitan area on the 19 different applications for transportation money.

Extra patrols for Halloween

The Village of Arlington Heights is planning to use members of the Civil Defense and the police auxiliary to bolster neighborhood patrols on Halloween, Oct. 31.

The extra men will be in marked village cars and in radio contact with regular Arlington Heights patrolmen, according to Assistant Village Mgr. Darryl Kenning, village civil defense director.

The men will patrol parks, schools and other likely targets for Halloween vandals.

In addition to the extra surveillance, the Halloween patrols provide an opportunity to test civil defense radio communications, Kenning said.

Arlington Heights, unlike some other communities, has no special Halloween regulations aimed at controlling traditional "Trick or Treat" activities.

Arlington Heights Police Capt. Jack Aldrich said police patrols will be "beefed up" with some men given only two or three calls to watch.

"We're not going to cancel everybody's day off but we will have more cars on the street," he said.

Learning is just a game for kids

by BETTY LEE

A young student picks up the dice, throws them and moves a toy car across the game board.

"OK," said another student. "Spell bankruptcy." Spelling the word correctly would mean five points to the player's score.

Learning the abc's, spelling or math can be as easy as playing games. And playing games is just what children in Arlington Heights elementary schools are doing.

"It's a different way of learning," said Mrs. Karen Munson, a fifth-grade teacher at Kensington School in Dist. 25. She made several games for her students to play. "The kids can teach themselves."

THE CHILDREN teach themselves pronunciation, syllabication, spelling and definition by playing "Speedyway."

In "Judgment" students learn to differentiate between synonyms, homonyms and antonyms.

"The games can be changed so that they'll be appropriate at each grade," said Mrs. Munson. The basic game of "Speedyway" intended for older students, can be changed to teach younger students the abc's, she said. Instead of pronunciation or other skills, the simpler skills require the younger students to recognize letters and words and to use them in sentences.

"Contig" is a game which provides mathematical exercises. The gameboard consists of numbers listed in increasing order. The child throws three dice and must use all three numbers (by adding, subtracting, multiplying or dividing) in order to cover a number on the board. The next child repeats the procedure, but must be able to cover a number adjacent to that of the player before him.

"In math it's important to have tangibles," said Mrs. Munson. "There are cuisenaire rods, and geoblocks, so this is another way of using tangibles. They can hold it in their hands."

THE GAMES WERE recently introduced at a seminar given at the teacher center in Olive School. Mrs. Munson gave demonstrations and teachers are adopting them for their own classrooms. The biggest asset of the games is that teachers or students can modify each game so that it would be suitable in their own classrooms.

In Mrs. Munson's class, students can play the games every day, after their regular studies. "They can apply what they have learned," she said. "And they learn to work with others. They can't be bossy."

Ridge Avenue section to get walks

Children who walk to school along Ridge Avenue between Thomas and Oakton streets will have sidewalks, but not until next spring.

About a dozen parents signed a letter sent to the Arlington Heights Board of Local Improvements expressing their concern for children's safety because there are no sidewalks on Ridge.

"The sidewalks are included in the comprehensive east sidewalk plan," said Russell Colvin, board president. Sidewalks cannot be installed during the winter because of cold weather conditions, according to village engineers.

Sidewalk installation will resume in spring when weather permits, said Colvin. Meanwhile, board officials will reinspect the area.

Residents who appeared at the last board meeting requested alternate safety measures until the sidewalks are installed, said Colvin. They asked for a stop sign on Ridge and a 35-miles-per-hour sign to slow down traffic.

"Our engineer told them that in previous experience, these things don't always work," said Colvin. "We told them to tell their children to use an alternate route."

Costs of the sidewalks have not yet been determined. They will be installed either by special assessment, or if all residents of the area consent, by special contract, which would be cheaper because there is no court cost.

Fagin's new pitch: 'Please, buy this poor kid's candy'

by JOE SWICKARD

The Northwest suburbs, and other affluent Chicago areas, are likely targets for illegally employed crews of youthful door-to-door salesmen, warn spokesmen for the state department of labor and attorney general.

The saleskids, often as young as 9 or 10 years old, peddle candy house-to-house with the proceeds ostensibly benefiting an organization for the betterment of youth. However, the spokesmen said, the money from the oft-times overpriced candies enriches the children's boss and not a charitable organization.

Donald Mulack, of the attorney general's charitable trust division, outlined the illegal operation: "Children from culturally and economically deprived neighborhoods are recruited through handbills promising $10 to $15 a week for working after school. They may also promise some prize or bonus to the kids who sells the most — something like a pizza for the most sales in a night or earning points toward a bicycle."

MULACK SAID there are many companies operating in this manner. "We have a whole stack of files but we're concentrating on three or four."

He said two of them, National Youth Clubs of America and Student Opportunity for Self-achievement, were example of for-profit groups using names that sound like charitable organizations.

The children are divided into sales crews of about five each who are driven by the crew boss to a wealthy neighborhood or suburb, Mulack said. The boss drops the children off and cruises the neighborhood while the children make their pitch, he said.

"The kids use a sympathy approach. They say what the boss told them, and often they don't really understand it

Flower peddling leads to 12 arrests

Two Chicago men and 10 juveniles were arrested by Illinois State Police this weekend on charges stemming from the operation of an illegal street flower-peddling ring.

The 12 arrests were made at four suburban locations, North and 1st Avenues, Ill. Rtes. 83 and 72, Ill. Rte. 58 and Busse Road, and Ill. Rtes. 59 and 19. Police said the two teenagers charged were operating the selling ring by bringing youths from Chicago's south side to the locations to sell the flowers to passing motorists.

Charged with violating the state's child labor laws were Richard A. Berry, 17, of 4815 S. Keating, and Michael E. Doody, 18, of 6006 S. Parkside, both in Chicago. Police said the two violated the child labor laws by using the youths to violate state laws prohibiting peddling on a state highway without a permit.

Names of the 10 youths charged, including three girls and seven boys, could not be released.

BERRY AND Doody were arrested by police at the intersection of Rtes. 83 and 72 where three of the juveniles were also working, police said.

One of the girls arrested was holding

$80 at the time she was charged, according to police.

Police said flower peddling is usually common on special holidays and weekends, but arrests usually number only one or two on any weekend. Crackdowns on the illegal sale of the flowers peak during the spring and summer months when the peddling is most frequent, police said.

Berry and Doody were released on $1,000 bond each. They are scheduled to appear in Mount Prospect circuit court Dec. 10. The 10 juveniles are scheduled to appear on varying dates in juvenile court.

box of candy sold, while the boss may keep up to 70 cents per box.

HARRIET PACINI, superintendent of the labor department said the use of the saleskids is in violation of state child labor laws. She said children under 14 cannot sell door-to-door in connection with for-profit organizations. Youngsters may, she pointed out, legally sell newspaper or magazine subscriptions in this manner.

Children between the ages of 14 and 16 may work at non-hazardous jobs, but she said door-to-door sales do not fit that category.

Because the saleskids often work from about 4 p.m. till 8 or 9 p.m., they are again breaking the law, Mrs. Pacini said. "If they are working after 7 p.m., that's another violation of the child labor laws," she said.

She said the saleskids often operate under the threat of fines by the crew boss. "Some we have talked to have said they had to pay 50 cents for the boss' gas if they didn't sell enough . . . some were abandoned in the Loop. They were actually afraid to meet their boss because they hadn't sold any candy. That's why we call them (the bosses) modern day Fagins."

BOTH MULACK AND Mrs. Pacini said they are after the "guy who makes the buck out of this." A Berwyn man was recently convicted after he was arrested while directing a sales crew on Chicago's South Side.

The operators of the businesses claim the law is discriminatory. They contend the sale of candy is no different than the sale of subscriptions.

Mulack and Mrs. Pacini said persons should question any child carefully who claims to be selling candy or similar goods for a charitable organization. If there are any doubts, persons should contact the state attorney general's office, the state department of labor or their local police.

"We're trying to protect the kids. Kids 9 and 10 are being recruited. This is just ridiculous. Child labor laws were set up to prevent this kind of abuse," Mulack said.

Dist. 25 wrapupSoby appointed parley delegate

Richard Soby, member of the Arlington Heights School Dist. 25 Board of Education, will be the district's delegate at the annual conference of the Illinois Association of School Boards to be held Nov. 16 through 19 at the Palmer House, Chicago.

Soby, who lives at 1014 E. Jules, Arlington Heights will participate in several panel discussions which concern school board members.

On the final day of the convention, all seven members of the school board and administrators will attend the annual banquet. Art Linkletter will be the guest speaker on the drug abuse crisis.

Board member Nicholas J. Raino will be the alternate delegate. The conference will be held jointly with the Illinois Association of School Administrators and the Illinois Association of School Business Administrators.

Soby also will attend the fall conference of the Tri-County division of the Illinois Association of School Boards on Wednesday in Waukegan. The focus of the conference will be on individualized instruction, learning and curriculum.

Insurance pact OK'd

The school board last week approved the expenditure of $17,324 for the district's insurance policy.

Due to increased coverage, the figure represents $2,470 more than the amount approved previously by the board.

This year the insurance contract was awarded to Lumberman's Mutual Casualty Company of Long Grove.

Park district offers play for children

The Arlington Heights Park District will sponsor a field trip to the Goodman Theater Nov. 23, to see Kenneth Graham's "The Wind in the Willows."

The outing is planned for children ages 6 to 12; however, children under 8 years old must be accompanied by someone at least 14 years old. Parents are welcome.

Buses will leave Frontier Park about 1 p.m. and Camelot Park about 1:15 p.m. They will return about 5 p.m.

Registration is now being taken at Camelot and Frontier parks. The cost is $3.50.

Camelot Park is offering a kindergarten through third grade recreation program Wednesday from 3:30 until 5 p.m. There is no fee.

Two blood donor days this month

Two blood donor days have been scheduled in Arlington Heights for October.

The first will be from 12:30 to 3 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 21, at Southminster Presbyterian Church, Central Road at Dryden Place.

The second will be from 3:30 to 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 30, at Thomas Junior High School, 303 E. Thomas St.

Persons wishing to participate in the village's guaranteed blood replacement program are asked to call 253-2340, ext. 245, for an appointment.

Homecoming comes to Prospect High

The coronation of the homecoming queen Friday will be the highlight of "Knights Week" at Prospect High School in Mount Prospect.

Students are building floats for the homecoming parade scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Thursday. The parade will begin at Owens Park and travel to the school. Following the parade, there will be a pep rally on the football field and a student dance.

The homecoming queen will be crowned at 2 p.m. Friday at a student assembly in the fieldhouse. She will be presented that night in special program ceremonies set for 7:45 p.m.

Prospect then will meet Forest View High School in a football contest at 8 p.m. Winners of the float contest will be announced at the game.

A semi-formal student dance is scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday in the school cafeteria. Tickets are $3.50.

4 head-on victims still hospitalized

Four people remain hospitalized after a head-on, two-car collision in Arlington Heights Friday night at Fairview Lane and Arlington Heights Road.

Scott Campbell, 20, of 382 Lincoln Terr., Buffalo Grove, was listed in serious, but improving, condition at Northwest Community Hospital yesterday.

Arlington Heights police said Campbell, driver of one car, suffered multiple cuts, broken legs and a collapsed lung.

A spokesman for the hospital said Campbell was still in the intensive-care unit.

His passenger, Michael S. Murray, 23, of 228 Inverrary Ln., Deerfield, was removed from the serious list, according to the hospital. Murray sustained a skull fracture and chest injuries, police said.

The driver of the second car, Harry Lawrence, 17, of 450 Navaio Tr., Buffalo Grove, was listed in fair condition with head injuries and a broken jaw, the hospital said.

Lawrence's passenger, 15-year-old Kimberly Schroeder, of 2627 Ridge Ave., Arlington Heights, was listed in good condition with head injuries, according to hospital reports.

Arlington Heights police said the accident occurred when Campbell's car was apparently traveling on the wrong side of the road.

School board wrapupSafety upgrading bids are sought

The Dist. 23 school board will seek bids on an estimated $108,480 in life safety improvements to MacArthur, Junior High School, Ann Sullivan and Betsy Ross schools.

The work is required by the Illinois Life Safety Code which sets safety requirements for schools.

The improvements include installing fire alarm monitoring systems in the three schools, relief valves on hot water storage tanks and boilers, heat detectors and repairs to roofs and sidewalks plus other safety items.

Dist. 23 is required by the state to complete the Life Safety work by June of 1974.

District to gain $52,050

A Wheeling developer has agreed to donate $52,050 to Dist. 23 to help offset the economic impact of his planned condominium project on local schools.

Victor Smigel, developer of The Forums on Elmhurst Road, north of Pleasant Run Drive, has said he will deliver the check for the donation today to Dist. 23 Supt. Ed Grodsky.

If the project is approved by the Wheeling Village Board Monday, Smigel plans to begin construction of the 150-unit complex this fall, finishing most of it by next spring.

6 firemen escaped death in Saturday blaze cave-in

by STIRLING MORITA

Six Hoffman Estates firefighters escaped injury and possibly death Saturday when the roof of the Service Merchandise Inc. store collapsed because of an intense fire.

"It was the most dangerous situation we've had fighting a fire in town," said Deputy Fire Chief Ed Kalasa. "Everyone in the center of the roof for some reason moved back, and then the center caved in."

He added that when the center of the roof fell, the flames shot up "like a volcano."

Kalasa had climbed back to the roof to warn the firefighters that something seemed to be wrong with the one-story building in the Golf-Rose Shopping Center. "Nobody knew why they moved back from the center."

"The same thing happened below," the deputy chief recalled. "There were about ten men in the center of the building, and the heat was intense so they backed up. Then the roof caved in. It was a good thing they moved because they could have been caught under it."

KALASA SAID the steel-bar joist roof was dangerous in this situation because

"they gave no warning when they're going to give in."

The roof caved in about 5 a.m. an hour after firefighters had arrived on the scene. The men on the roof were chopping holes to ventilate the flaming building, Kalasa said.

Kalasa said when he went to the back of the building to supervise the men, he saw the building starting to shake. He clambered back up the ladder to warn the firefighters, and an air horn was sounded twice to attract the busy men's attention.

The roof caved in, and flames gushed up. The men were quickly evacuated down the ladders.

"When I got down, I started to count heads," Kalasa said. "There was one volunteer fireman missing. We couldn't find him, and I thought he went down with the roof."

"But he was outside the building, just not in sight," Kalasa said.
